

ADDRESS OF THE CARRIER OF THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEER.

JANUARY 1, 1860.

Another New Year's day has come, Bright and glorious as the sun, And the Carrier comes to greet you, Greet you with his New Year's song; Greet you as he's always wont to On this happy day of days.

Therefore, patrons, meet him kindly, Kindly smile upon the Carrier For his faithful duties to you, And his weekly visits to you, Leaving the news regular as clock-work, Only when he happens to miss you.

But we have much to tell of troubles, Troubles that have lately sprung up, Sprung up down at Harper's Ferry, In the State of Old Virginia, How "Old Brown" did free the slaves and Conquer the State—almost—hardly.

How Captain Cook, the noble warrior, Had escaped and been arrested, Had been tried and been convicted, But Virginia she did "fetch 'em," Fetched 'em up to please the people, And stretched their necks just as she ought to.

But if they'd hung such men as Greely, Sumner, Giddings, Hale, and Smith, Then the Union would be rid Of the vilest reptiles That ever disgraced American's soil, Or'er-breathed Freedom's air.

In the street of South Hanover, In the city of Carlisle, Stands a mansion in the back-ground, Occupied by an honest laborer, Laborer for the people's good, And the benefit of our city.

Though this man is small of stature, Scarcely four feet does he measure, Yet he's honest and he's useful, Useful as a man of business, Useful as a clerk or banker, Is his man of whom we speak.

He's never been of dark crimes guilty, Never committed theft or wrong; Though he sometimes takes a drink, Drink of "Minnie's" brandy, Or perchance a nip of "tangle-foot," Yet he's surely always sober.

But the people they will slander, Slander men because they're poor, And the hero of our story, Is attacked by their vile slang, Because he lives on honest labor, And strives to do the best he can.

But his fame they cannot darken, Fame that he has won most nobly, Noble for the many evils, That he had to overcome, Which flows from scoffs of wicked men Whose minds are bent on doing evil.

You say he drinks too much bad whisky, Whisky that will kill him surely, But say no more about his drinking, So long as his work attains to: His health is that of paper-carrier, And his name is GEORGE L. GOUCHER.

Oh he's seen at noon or morn, With his paste-pot and his brush, Spreading his news upon the trees, Of some theatre or some concert, Or perchance a fresh arrival Of old goods at some new store.

Thus with ladder, bills, and paste-pot, Does he travel 'er our town; Now he starts upon a gallop— Now upon his ladder perches: For indeed a ladder's needed! For a man as small as he.

Now on trees he daubs his paste, Daubs it on most awful thickly, And then sings his poster on it, Slaps it on—er—pasted on it, Well, mistakes will often happen Even to the best of men.

Sometimes he gets a little "blincy," Blincy "causes the wind his eyes hurt!" And sometimes too much exposure; But still with daring recklessness, And almost at the lightning's speed, He pastes his bills up and is gone.

But let us now our subject change And to the College campus roam; To the place where often happen Things of very startling nature; Fights and squabbles 'mong the young ones Which the town folks know not of.

Of the students get their "backs up," 'Cause the town boys want some fun, And take possession of their "fixins," Fixins' called by them "gymnaziums," Fixins' that the students put up, Put up some two years ago.

These attempts result in squabbles, And sometimes in petty fights, And often cause "unpleasant conflicts!" Not like those at Harper's Ferry, Got up to free the Southern niggers, But merely for excitement's sake.

But we must speak of some great evils, Evils of our own little city, Evils that had best be looked to, Since there's danger in delay; The evils that we now allude to Are the rowdies on the Square.

At all hours, either day or night, Loufers on the Square are seen, Such as Nose Licker, "Blincy," And worthless Howard, alias "Duke," And a host of other niggers Of about the same repute.

But there are not only niggers, Loufers on the Square are seen, But many whites who are no better Than their "colored brethren" are; And all drink "rot-gut" from one bottle.

Could not this a stop be put, To the Council of our Borough, And the results be improved? From the places otherwise handsome, But now polluted by their slang, And detested by the people.

But we'll cease to talk of things That we know not much about: We will but say a few words more To remind our readers of their duty, Of their duty to the carrier, To the carrier of their papers.

Let the merry jingle, jingle, Of the silver dimes and quarters, Be in your Carrier's breeches pocket Heard, to cheer the weary Carrier, And you will be forever remembered, By your Carrier, GEORGE L. GOUCHER.
