"Your father will be very angry," said an aunt, who was sitting in the room with a bool The boy raised himself from the sofa, where he had been laying in tears for half an hour and with a touch of indignation in his voice he

"He'll be sorry, not angry. Father never gets angry."

For a few moments the aunt looked at the boy half curiously, and let her eyes fall again upon the book that was in her hand. The boy laid himself down upon the sofa again, and hid his face from sight.

"That's my father, now!"

He started up after the lapse of nearly ten minutes, as the sound of a bell reached his ear, and went to the room door. He stood there for a little while, and then came slowl back, saying with a disappointed air—
"It isn't father. I wonder what keeps him so late. O, I wish he would come!" You seem anxious to get deeper into trouble," remarked the aunt, who had only been in the house for a week, and who was neither very amiable nor very sympathising towards children. The boy's fault had provoked her, and she considered him a fit subject for punishment.

'I believe aunt Phebe, that you'd like to see me whipped," said the boy, a little warmly. "But you wont."
"I must confess," replied aunt Phebe,
"that I think a little wholesome discipline of the kind you speak of would not be out of place. If you were my child, I am sure you would not escape."

"I am not your child. I don't want to be Father is good and loves me." "If your father is so good, and loves you so well, you must be a very ungrateful or a very inconsiderate boy. His goodness don't seem to have helped you much."

"Hush will you!" ejaculated the boy, excited to anger by this unkindness of speech.

It was the boy's mother who spoke for the first time. In an under tone she added—
"You are wrong. Richard is suffering quite enough, and you are doing him harm rather than good."

Again the bell rang, and again the boy left the sofn and went to the sitting-room do 'It's father."

And he went gliding down stairs.

"Ah, Richard," was the kindly greeting, as Mr. Gordon took the hand of his boy.— But what's the matter, my son? You do not look happy."

"Won't you come in here?" And Richard drew his father into the library. Mr. Gordon sat down, still holding Richard's hand. You are in trouble, my son. What has

The eyes of Richard filled with tears as he looked into his father's face. He tried to answer, but his lips quivered. Then he turned away, and opening the door of the cabinet, brought out the fragments of a broken statuette, which had been sent home only the day before, and set them on a table before his fa ther, over whose countenance came instantly a shadow of regret. Who did this, my son?" was asked in an

I threw my ball in there, once-only once, The boy's tones were husky and tremulous.

A little while Mr. Gordon sat, controlling himself, and collecting his disturbed thoughts. Then he said gently:
"What is done, Richard, can't be helped.

Put the broken pieces away. You have had trouble enough about it, I can see, and reproof enough for your thoughtfulness, so I shall not add a word to increase your pain."

"O, father!" And the boy threw his arms around his father's neck. "You are so kind boy. Mrs. Gordon threw upon her sister a look of warning, but it was unheeded.

"I think Richard was a very naughty boy."

"We have settled all that, Phebe," was the mild but firm answer of Mr. Gordon; "and it is one of our rules to get into the sunshine a quick as possible.' Phebe was rebuked; while Richard looked grateful, and, it may be, a little triumphant, for his aunt had borne down upon him rather too hard for a boy's nationce to endure. Into the sunshine as quickly as possible! O, is not that the better philosophy for our

Is it not true Christian philosophy? It is selfishness that grows angry and rebels be-cause a fault has been committed. Let us get the offender into the sunshine as quickly as possible, so that true thoughts and right teelings may grow vigorous in its warmth. We retain anger, not that anger may act as a wholesome discipline, but because we are unwilling to forgive. Ah, if we were always right with ourselves, we would oftener be righ with our children.

"It is not work that kills men; it is worry.

Work is healthy. You can hardly put more on a man than he can bare. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery but the friction. Fear secretes acid, but love and trust are sweet jui-"We knew a man with a patient, good

"He is always in a fret. Everything goes wrong. You would think that he was made of cross-grained timber, and had always been trying to digest a cross-cut saw. He is eternally cross, and thinks that his wife and children, hired hands, and all the domestic an mals, have entered into a combination to worry him to death. He is not only rusty, but fairly crusted over with it. He is encased in a shell of acid secretions, through which no sweet juice ever distill. Friction has literally worn him out, and he will soon worry him self to death. Of course he has never worked to any advantage to himself or anybody else. With him everything always goes wrong.— He superstitiously believes it is because the devil has a spite against him, when in truth it is nothing but his own fretfulness."

prosperity, because others do. The dishonest man, who cheats his own soul more vitally than he does his fellow-men.
