How beautiful is that religion which teaches not to love God above all things and my neighbor as myself! Religion is benevolenc and behavolence includes every virtue. The benevolent cannot be uncharitable cannot be censorious cannot be impure in act or thought—cannot be selfish—they love God and their neighbors, and they do as they would be done by. But who is religious? who is benevolent? who is at all times pure in would be done by. But who is religious? Such as Lawns, Lawn Robes, Bereges, Berege Dewho is benevolent? who is at all times pure in thought or deed? who is at all times free from and plain; Dress Silks of all kinds, Foulards and ensoriousness, from uncharitableness? None. No, not one. The precepts taught us as those on which "hang all the laws and the prophets," the love of God and the love of thy neighbor may be impressed upon the heart and have the whole undivided assent of the understand ing; while the mind is in this state, the indi vidual is religious. But the cares of the world and their jarring collisions must at all times occupy the thoughts, and divert the mind from this wholesome state. The passions which have been cherished by bad eduation—the indulgences that have become habitual before the beauty of wisdom was perceived by the thousand and ten thousand oc currences which tempt the rich to uncharitableness, and the poor to envy and malice, all by turns, banish the truth from the mind This has led men to the desert and to the monastery; to become hermits and monks; forgetting that religion requires to do as to suffer. Truth becomes effective by frequent contemplation; and the habitual recurrence of its precepts induces practice.

PURITY OF CHARACTER .- Over the beauty of the plum and the apricot there grows a bloom and beauty more exquisite than the fruit it-self—a soft, delicate flush that overspreads self—a solf, deficate fush that of what its blushing check. Now if you strike your hand over that, and it is once gone, it is gone forever; for it never grows but once. The flower that hangs in the morning impearled with the dew—arrayed as no queenly woman ever was arrayed in jewels—once shake it so that the heads roll off, and you may sprinkle that the beads roll off, and you may sprinkle water over it as you please, yet it can never be made again what it was when the dew fell silently upon it from heaven! On a frosty morning you may see the panes of glass corered with landscapes—mountains, lakes and trees, blending in a beautiful, fantastic picture. Now lay your hand upon the glass, and by the scratch of your finger, or warmth of your palm, all the delicate tracery will be obliterated. So there is in youth a beauty and purity of character, which when once touched, and defiled, can never be restored—a fringe more delicate than frost work, and which when torn and broken will never be which when born and bloken with hot re-embroidered. A man who has spotted and soiled his garments in youth, though he may seek to make them white again, can never wholly do it even were he to wash them with its tears. When a young man leaves his father's house, with the blessing of his mother's fears still wet upon his forehead, if he once less that purity of character, it is a loss that well and organy Lawas.

AN AFRICAN MOTHER MEETS SOME OF HER CHILDREN AT KEY WEST.—Among the rescued from the bark Wildfire is a middle aged women and three children. She seemed quiet and subdued in manner, and excited no special attention, other than that she had a part of her family with her. Her great hope was to meet the others from whom fate had separated her. On the landing of the William's cargo, she, with others of the first arrival, peeped over the fence which separated the new comers from the old. Quick maternal instinct discovered no less than four among the crowd whom she claimed as her daugh ters. She gave went to her joy in the loud language of song, and the children, hearing the familiar air of home, caught sight of the singer in whom they found their lost mother. The meeting was one of tumultuous joy; shouts rose from three hundred voices, in the gladness of a simple mother, and with her daughters entwined in each other's arms, the mother took them with her, to meet the long separated, of whose fate each party was in

GENTLEMEN: Your note of the 15th inst., has been received, saying that you heard that I had been benefited by the use of Wood's Hair Restorative, benefited by the use of Wood's Hair Restorative, and requesting my certificate of the fact if I had no objection to give it.

I award it to you cheerfully, because I think it due. My age is about 50 years; the color of my hair auburn, and inclined to curl. Some five or six years since it began to turn gray, and the scalp on the crown of my head to lose its sensibility and dandruff to form upon it. Each of these disageabilities increased with time, and about four months since a fourth was added to them, by hair falling off the top of my head and threatening to make me bald. fourth was added to them, by hair falling off the top of my head and threatening to make me bald.

In this unpleasant predicament, I was induced to try Wood's Hair Restorative, mainly to arrest the falling off of my hair, for I had really no expectation that gray hair could ever be restored to its original color except from dyes. I was, however, greatly surprised to find after the use of two bottles only, that not only the falling off was arrested, but the color was metavad to the gray hairs and sensibility
