

The Present State of the Indians.
In this article we shall confine our attention to the Indians of the United States and Territories, saying nothing of the same class in the British Possessions in North America, or of the American Indians in Mexico, Central America, and South America. The basis for our remarks is the annual report of Mr. Thompson, Secretary of the Interior, under date of Dec. 1st, 1859, and the report of Mr. Greenwood Commissioner of Indian Affairs, dated a few days earlier. The latter document is full and elaborate; the former, though succinct, gives the most important facts pertaining to the Red Men within our borders.
The population of this country is made up of several elements, we all know. There are native white inhabitants that, according to the last census, numbered about 16,000,000. There are also 3,000,000 of foreigners. Considering the last as all naturalized, we have 19,000,000 of citizens in full. These classes take an active part in Church and State. They are the active, influential power in the Union. We next have 4,000,000 of colored people, 250,000 Indians, by estimate, whom the laws and public opinion either do not regard as citizens at all, or not fully such. There are others who, though not classified in the census, have less to do with our civil life than the black men and yet more to do with it. We refer to the most wretched classes of the Abolitionists, and the Mormons.
What other civilized country in the world has such different and discordant elements? And if there is no other, is it all to be wondered at in view of the heterogeneous materials that compose this Republic?
The estimated number of Indians in this country is quite small, not half a million before the first advent of the whites, there were many millions. Not long anterior to the landing of the pilgrims, vast numbers of them were cut off by disease. And then, tribes devoured one another in constant wars. At the present time, the number of Indians tribes are increasing their numbers. The great majority of them are on the decline. For example, the once famous confederacy of the Six Nations, whose despotism was extended from the shores of Lake Michigan to the Carolinas, and from the St. Lawrence River to the Chesapeake, could count but 9,000 at the opening of the War of the Revolution. They are now chiefly in the State of New York, and number but 4000. And yet their decline has been far less rapid than that of other tribes who have frequently been removed from place to place. In the older portions of the United States, where the Indians were once so numerous and so powerful, they have melted away before the advancing tide of civilization. In New England, the Narragansett, the Mohegan, and other tribes of brave warriors abounded, there are only a remnant of the poor and feeble Penobscots, that may be seen every summer at Nahant and elsewhere, and a few other Indians at Marquette remaining. In the State of New York, the Senecas have been removed from Florida by the Mississippi River, with the exception of the great Southern tribes in the Indian Territory, West of Arkansas, and Southern Missouri. These tribes of all others in the country, were possibly the most civilized, the most civilized and christianized. Scarcely any missions ever established in the world have been more successful than those among the Choctaws, Chickosaws and other tribes by the American and Presbyterian Boards of Missions. The Indians there generally live in peace, quietly pursuing trade and agricultural employments, and giving the general government no trouble. Like those in New York, they have their churches, their schools, their native teachers, and their privileges of more favored communities.
The remaining tribes, West of the Father of Waters, are chiefly un civilized, pursuing a wild and wandering life. Many of them have been injured in various ways, by the government's appropriation of too much money, instead of agricultural implements and seeds that might have led them to cultivate more extensively the lands reserved for them. With too free an issue of money, they have been tempted to buy ardent spirits and other articles that the whites are too ready to sell them, but which lead to dissipation and to an idle life. The average annual expenditure on Indian account is now $9,000,000, or not an extravagant sum. Yet, if we consider the vast obligations that we are under to them, owing to the extensive domain, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, we have received from them at a nominal price, and then, by the addition of our own public lands by new treaties with the Indians. Of these, twelve in number, ten are with fifty tribes and bands in Washington Territory and Oregon, embracing about 19,000 Indians, and which have been purchased in the Indian Territory country amounting to 58,000,770 acres, at a cost of about five and three fifths cents per acre. This is about the usual price paid to the Indians for land. Thus the government gets a profit, if it sells, at what is considered the low price for land. The profit may seem larger than it is to the reader, who forgets that the government is at great expense in removing the Indians and in protecting the frontier settlements.
There is still another way in which the Indians have been injured, and that is by the hundreds of thousands of emigrants who have peacefully crossed the country. This has grown out of the failure of their crops, in part, and partly because they were urged on by the fanatical whites of the Territory.—Boston Post.
