the body alone, but the mind, would be benefitted, and the heart also. Singular, Some days ago a young man named Swan, employed in an eastern mill, was caught by the arm in some machinery, and the limb was so badly broken and man-gled that immediate amputation was deemed necessary. This was successfully performed, but according to an exchange, which relates the incident, the maimed man's connection with the dissevered limb did not cease with the operation. We quote as follows: "On recovering from the stupor (produced by the use of chloroform.) Mr. Swan still complained sorely of the aching hand. Late in the evening, his distress became very great, and he insisted that the hand was oramped by being doubled up. The limb had been pleced in a small box and buried. His at-tendants dug it up and straightened the hand, and he was soon easier. This morning the which he is again relieved. What does this mean? Is it all imagination? If this instance were a solitary one we might think so. But there are so many similar well-attested cases on record, that we can only shake our heads and say,

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Than are dreamed of in our philosophy.'

THE JAPANESE .- This singular and attractive geople will soon be very well informed of the condition, politics, customs and manners of the United States. Every Japanese carries an inkstand and a note book, and the embassy will be accompanied by a corps of first-class reporters. The Japanese system of Govern-ment has its faults, and a complete and intri-American ships off Japan was taken down on the spot and carried to head-quarters. This ourious and progressive race wants to know us thoroughly, and they will doubtless be able and anxious to adopt our discoveries in mechanics and science.

But we cannot be prepared to be criticised from a Japanese stand point, for we differ in politics, civilization and religion; and we must not expect them to tear down, or even materially to modify, their offhand system and tradition and habits, founded, as they are, on the growth and experience of centuries. But from the mild and amiable character of the Japanese, the gentle and kindly relations which govern their social and domestic life, which govern their social and domestic life, their simple, pliant, impressionable, but hon-est dispositions, and the absence of religious persecutions and fanaticism in Japan, it is easy to believe that the principles of Christi-anity will ultimately be acceptable to the peo-ple, and that the enlightened Embassadors may carry home seed which will one day bear fruit.

A'STAVERI-Wonder how some of our land-Tom died in Baltimore on Wednesday, and the Republican, in noticing hie death, says:

the Republican, in noncomente death, says: "He has been known to eat a moderate sized ham, with expectables, &...in proportion, at one meal. Sizing bayes of bread, with more than a quart of coffee or tea, would carcely suffica for his breakfast or supper. A good sized goose or turkey would disappear from, sight in a short space of time. His daughter would prepare a plum pudding at stated periods, and cook it in a bushel bag. This would serve him and two others as a dessert."
