

Indian Troubles in New Mexico—Blast Treacherous

INDEPENDENCE, September 17.—The "New Mexico mail, with dates to the 3d instant, arrived this evening. A convention of the people of New Mexico met at Santa Fe on the 17th ult., for the purpose of making arrangements for the protection of their lives and property from the ravages of the Navajo and other Indians. They resolved to raise 1000 volunteers, and asked the Governor to receive them, but he would not. They then passed resolutions that owing to private quarrels between the officers of the regular army, no dependence could be placed on them, and that the regular troops in the Territory, are not sufficient for its protection. They determined to take the horses out of the carriage and drag the vehicles themselves. The carriages moved over the whole city, surrounded by eager and excited spectators, and it was not until next day that they discovered that they had been paying honors to a bogus Prince.

COL. FORTESCUE has ordered a campaign against the Indians, to move in three separate columns on the 1st of October. On the 8th inst., a band of Kiowas numbering eleven, with Cotanek, their chief, went to Allison's ranch on Creek and agreed with Mr. Pencock, the proprietor, to cross the river, and go to the Pawnee Fork and remain there until the United States forces. True to their promises, the men and induced Mr. Pencock to give them a company of soldiers some distance off. While Mr. Pencock was in the rear looking, they shot him through the head, and also through the body, killing him.

They then shot Mr. Pencock in the chest, but did not kill him at once. He retreated to a room in his house, a sick man, and warning of what was going on, sank down and died almost immediately. The sick man was armed with revolvers, which the Indians being apprised of, did not see proper to molest, they loaded eleven ponies with goods and started off.

The people at Caw Creek were expecting an attack from the same Indians, and had only the company of a soldier to protect them.

Mr. KAY had eight head of cattle at Caw Creek. They were run off by a stampede of Indians, and he is on route for Santa Fe with a large train.

A band of Pawnees and Otto Indians, a few days ago, came to Council Grove, and run off sixty head of mules and ponies.

From all the information to be had, it seems that there is a determination plan among the Indians to make war upon the army and Indians traving the plains.

A DREADFUL ACCIDENT.—A MAN FALLS FROM THE TOP OF A STEEPLE.—Two men were in the 22d inst., employed in giving the dome of St. Patrick's Church, West Troy, a coat of white paint. Before going up, one of them, John Fishback, was noticed by his companions to have been drinking, and was remonstrated with for ascending; but it was said in reply that he was better able to go up in that condition than though he was perfectly sober, and as it appeared he was quite rational, and but slightly under the influence of liquor, he was permitted to go up. Sixty-one feet from the ground is a narrow ledge or cornice, from two to three feet wide, running around the dome. Upon this ledge the two men had been at work some time, having previously finished the painting above by means of ladders fastened to the cross on the summit of the dome. On this narrow shelfing, where the men were at work, Fishback would frequently go all support from the dome, and walk on the very ledge, to show his nerve and bravado. The entreaties of his companions did so, induced him to still greater recklessness, until all at once his companion saw him going, when no power of him could stop him. He had lost his balance, and falling struck first upon a cornice quite a distance below, and then upon the ground, falling upon the right side of the head and shoulder, instantly killing him, causing the blood to spout from his ears, and driving the right side of his head and face into a horrid shape. Coroner Whitehead held an inquest, and the jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

CARD.—HARRIET.—In the last number of "Fastrer's Magazine," the word "fast," as applicable to the fair sex, is defined as "a combination of less desirable attributes of women." The writer describes his definition to say that a fast girl can ride across the country, smoke, eat, play billiards, bet, and talk about horseracing in a truly edifying manner. She wears finer and more vivid pincers, smaller hats, brighter feathers, boots with higher heels, and more plentifully decorated with little brass rings than those of her slower contemporaries, and piques herself on reading "Ling."
