"All through the night
The subtle frest hath plied its mystle art
And in the day the golden sun hath wrought True wonders: and the wings of morn and even Have touched with magic breath the changing leave
And now, as wanders the dilating eye Athwart the varied landscape circling far,
What gorgeousness, what blazonary, what pomp Of colors, burst upon the ravished sight!"
GALLAGHER.

What a change has come over the face Nature! The waving forest, so lately robe in deepest green, have assumed the gorgeous coloring in October. The foliage does not fade but brightens into death. The last days of the leaves are their best in beauty, viole pink, scarlet, crimson, as if their life blood were oozing from every pore. Nothing but observation could teach us that all this brilliancy and glory heralded death. It would seem that they were entering upon a new life, instead of being pushed off the stage to make way for a new generation.

The year has culminated in field and forest, and the farmer is gathering in his harvest.— The first frosts have come, and you see the small hoar crystals glittering in the morning sun upon the grass and along the fences. The pumpkin and squash vines are the first to feel s power, and the broad leaves droop and turn black, as the sun comes up, leaving the yellow globes, and the crook-necks all exposed The farmer hardly knew how rich he was until the frost cleared away the luxuriant mass of foliage. Now the potato patches and the edges of the corn-field and the gardens are yellow with the raw material of pumpin pies, and Thanksgiving. The orchards feel the chill breath of the frest, and you hear the apples dropping under all the trees, as if seeking warmer quarters in the thick grass beneath the branches. The apples are abundant in almost all parts of the country, and the poorest families can lay in their Winter stores of Greenings, Pippins, and Spitzenbergs. An orchard loaded with fruit, and ripening in the October sun, is one of the finest sights in the country. Here is a tree blushing in every bough with the crimson fruit, and there they hang in long yellow bunches waiting for the basket. The Winter fruits are-not harmed by the early frosts, and they will adhere to the branches until it is time to remove them by hand. The finishing touches to the flavor of the late fruits are given in the last few days of the season. If plucked too early, they shrivel, and do not ripen well in the cellar or fruit room. This is the reason why some condemn certain very fine Winter peaches. In some cases, the season is too short for them to some cases, the season is too short for them to of them stored in the Bank, but are individually reach maturity, in others, they are removed UALLY LIABLE TO THE EXTENT OF THEIR ESfrom the tree full two weeks before the close TATES for ALL THE DEPOSITS AND OTEER OBLIGAof the season. Most of the Winter varieties of pears and apples are furnished with a thick liage which adheres longer than on the Summer varieties, to afford protection to the fruit. We have sometimes left the Glout Morceau as late as the middle of November, with the best results. The picking, the sto-ring, and ripening of Winter fruit is an art that can not be learned in a single season.

With the harvest moon, come apple parings, and huskings, words full of meaning to the old men, if not to the boys. We see now the ample farmer's kitchen, and the bushel baskets heaped with apples, and the merry group of lads and lassies, seated for their work. There were at least a dozen of them gathere from the neighbors to lend a helping hand in preparing "the apple sass." It is now called apple butter, and by some very proper people auce." A barrel, at least, was to be pre pared from the green or rather fresh-pared sweet apples, and large stores of dried apples were to be laid up for Winter use. The head of the household, as was meet, used the paring machine with three-tined fork and knife that cut the skin as thin as a wafer. The pared apples fell with a wonderful rapidity into a large tub, and were thence distributed among the state of the skin as the skin as the skin as the skin as a wafer. The pared apples fell with a wonderful rapidity into a large tub, and were thence distributed among the skin as the skin as the skin as the skin as a wafer. The pared apples fell with a wonderful rapidity into a large tub, and were thence distributed among the skin as the nared from the green or rather fresh-nared the young folks, to be halved, quartered, cor ed, and strung upon twine about two yards in length, for drying. The string of apples, as they were finished, were put upon hooks in the ceiling, or upon poles ready to be removed in the morning to the sunny side of the house, where they hung in graceful festoons, the special delight of wasps and flies. With a huge pan of apples between a young couple, huge pan of apples between a young couple, the work went on merrily, if not rapidly, jokes flew back and forth, sometimes emphasized with apple seeds, and sometimes with something softer. Rustic awkwardness in company was happily overcome, for there was a valued for the hands and the hands are hands and the hands and the hands are hands are hands are hands are hands are hands and hands are a place for the hands, and the hands had mething to do. The tongues were unloosed, first about the work and the company, and then about something that might have been very hard work, under other circumstances. Wholes in the pan were halved and discons late halves, out of it, were eventually made whole. Work and wooing went together in those good old times, when the kitchen was hetter known than the parlor, and the pres ence of the "old folks at home" did not spoil the freedom and frolics of their children. The last apple being pared, and the last festoon hung up duly in its place, there was a resort to fortune telling. The rind of an ap-ple being passed three times round the head and dropped, invariably gave the first letter in the name of the successful lover. As the per cent, lower than ever offered in town. The entire stock of Watchmaker tools, cases, large Mirrors something that squinted that way, it was easy and Safe, will be sold wholesale or retail on the to worm the secret out of the most bashful swain, and point out him his intended Sarah or Sophia. These prophecies of the farmer's fireside sometimes turned out alarmingly correct, and were followed by wedding occasions. and new homes. The huskings in the long evening of the harvest moon were larger gatherings, and not usually cheered by the presence of the fair, until supper time.

"From many a brown old farm house, And hamlet without name Their milking and their home task done, The merry huskers came.

Swung o'er the heaped-up harvest

From pitchforks in the mow, Shone dimly down the lanterns
On the pleasant scene below;
The growing pile of husks behind,
The golden ears before,
And laughing eyes, and busy hands
And brown cheeks glimmering o'er.

Half hidden in a quiet nook, Talking their old times over,

The old men set apart;
While up and down the unhusked pile, Or nestling in its shade, At hide-and-seek, with laugh and shout. The happy children played."

In the warm frostless evenings, such as often have in this month, the scene was not laid upon the barn floor, but under the open sky, the full moon giving plenty of light for the huskers. When the work was done, the company edjourned to the house, and tea, coffee, cakes, and cheese, were served up in rustic style. These "bees" as they were sometimes called, were kindly in their influence. They often helped a short handed neighbor in his harvest and were happy social gatherings. The modern dances already beoften have in this month, the scene was not gatherings. The modern dances already becoming too popular among our rural popularition are poor substitutes for these primitive and simpler, but more natural and enjoyable festivities of olden time. For these there are display of expensive dress and dazneeded no display of expensive dress and dazzling jewelry, which are too often the regalia of idleness and vice. "The apple paring" and "the husking bee," are pleasant October memories with us. With a little re-modling to adapt them to the changing times, they ought to be perpetuated among the cherished institutions of farm life. With our bountiful
