planting fruit trees in the fall is preterred by many, so far us it relates to apples and cher-rices. For pears and small fruits, spring is better. An experienced fruit grower says: "We would make the locality, rather than the season, the guide in making the selection. In uplands, or land of a naturally dry, silitious nature, we should choose autumn ; but in moist, heavy, or argillatious soils, spring is undoubtedly the best, without reference to the variety of the fruit. And we should adopt this course whether in regard to shade or fruit trees-always excepting the evergreens, which we do not think do nearly so well in the fall as spring. The best time to trans-plant in the fall, is as soon as the trees are done growing, which can be determined by the change of the leaf. By this early operation the roots have time to seize upon the tion the roots have time to seize upon the Lovers, Lepines, American watches, and all other soil before winter sets in, and the tree is thus kinds and styles, gold and silver Chains, ready for an early start in the Spring, and is also better prepared to stand the severity o also better prepared to stand the severity of the winter. Large trees, especially, should be transplanted very early, or not until the ground is frozen hard. W

WINTER RULES .- Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. In going into a colder air, keep the mouth resolutely closed, that by compelling the air to pass circuitously through the of repairing will be done as usual, at reduced nose and head, it may become warmed before it reaches the lungs, and thus prevent those sudden chills and shocks, which produce pleurisy, pneumonia, and other serious forms of se. Never sleep with the head in the draft of an open door or window. Let more cover be on the lower limbs than on the body. Have an extra covering within reach in case of a sudden and great change of weather during the night. Never stand still a moment out of doors, especially at the street corners, after having walked even a short distance. Never ride near the open window of a vehicle for a single half minute, especially if it has been preceded by a walk; many valuable lives Have thus been lost, or good health perma-mently destroyed. Never put on a new boot for shoe in the beginning of a long walk.
