The licentiousness and thoughtlessness of King Charles II. have become proverbial, and King Charles II. have become proverbile, and his good nature, which qualified these, but ill which for variety, beauty, and price, cannot be excelled in the county. All of which will be sold per yard or made to measure in the most approved styles. he remained in Scotland, suffering the rebuke and consure of austero Presbyterianism, be fore the battle of Worcester, (1651,) his chief confident and associate was the Laird of Cockpen, called by the nicknaming manners of those times, "Blythe Cockpen." Cockpen followed Charles to the Hague, and by his skill in playing Scotch tunes, and his sagaciwit, much delighted his merry mon arch. Charles' favorite tune was "Brose and It was played to him when he went to bed, and he was awakened by it. At the Restoration, (1660,) however, Blythe Cockpon was forgotten, and he wandered upon the lands which he once owned in Scotland, poor and unfriended. Cockpen wrote to the Court. but his letters were never presented, or were not regarded. Wearied and incensed, he travoled to London and placed himself in all public places, thinking the eye of His Majesty, might reach him. But he was never noticed, and his mean garb did not suit the rich and embroidered doublets of court; so he was insulted and pushed away from approaching the King's presence. Cockpen, at length, attempted by cunning what he could not accomplish by plain dealing. He ingratiated himself with the King's organist, who was so en-raptured with Cockpen's wit and powers of music, that he requested him to play on the & Co., whose Banking Card will be seen below organ before King at divine service. Cockpen played with exquisite skill, yet never attracted His Majesty's eye. But at the close of the service, instead of playing the common tune used, he played up "Brose and Butter," with all its energy and characteristic merriment. The organist in a moment was ordered into the presence of Charles. "My liege John S. Sterrett, Isaac I John S. Sterrett, Isaac I H. A. Sturgeon. it was not I," he cried, and dropped upon his knees. "You!" cried His Majesty, in a deman, I was like to dance coming out of the church." "I once danced, too," said Cockpen, "but that was when I had land of my own to dance on." the King, taking him by the hand, "you shall dance to 'Brose and Butter' on your own lands again to the nineteenth generation," ' and he was as good as his promise."

REMARKABLE CASE OF A FAST WOMAN,—The Cleveland (O.) Plaindealer says, in that city one day last week, a woman, still young, and in whose face traces of former beauty were still discoverable, was sent to the county jail for vagrancy. Five years ago she was a school teacher in a small town in the State of Michigan.' She was pretty, educated, and captivating in manners. But she had an uncontrollable passion for dress, and was one day detected in the act of stealing a costly silk from the counter of the village store. She was arrested, but under promise of leaving the village, never more to return, she was spared the pain and mortification of a public trial for larceny. She traveled West, and en-countered a Southern planter somewhere on the route, who employed her as a governess in his family. She accompanied him to his home in the far South, where she succeeded in captivating him, causing his wife to sue for After thoroughly ruining the planter, and scandalizing his friends, she eloped with a ight mulatto, the most valuable servant in the planter's collection, and went to St. Louis. There, becoming sick of the mulatto, she sold him for $2000. She is next heard of as manageress and leading actress of a strolling the atrical company in the interior of Missouri playing star parts upon the stage, and 'doing susceptible grain merchants off. The St Louis papers last Spring contained numerou reports of her dashing swindle along the Missouri river. She ran a wild race in Chicago, and brought up in Bridewell, where she served out a short sentence for theft. She reach ed Cleveland in the course of time, hopelessly dissipated and shattered.

The story of the airs put on by a spry young lady because her father, a worthy blacksmith in the Western part of Pennsylvanin, had "struck ile," suggests an editorial in the Hartford Courant, on the way people "show off" when they get rich. We clip a paragraph: "When a man has struck ile himself, by his own perseverance and industry, we like to see him use it well, and if necessary, even for his own enjoyment. But we want to see him bring up his children as he was brought up himself, to work. Let them be taught to use their own perseverance and industry and strike ile for themselves .-It will be of more use to their characters and future destiny than if 'Dad' had 'struck' it for them. Every one who treads God's earth, and breathes God air, should feel it to be a duty to work-to make the world better for having lived in it-to be of some use in his day and generation. Let every one labor with his mind, if he does not with his hands. It is a sin and shame for stalwart men and women to fold up their hands and sit idle, merely because 'Dad has struck ile,'"

THE RIGHT KIND OF A NOISE .- Rigid discithe religious zeal of Christian soldiers, but great Generals like Cromwell and Wellington, know how to turn their zeal to good service. Here is a characteristic anecdote of Gen. Jackson: An officer once complained to Gen. Jackson that some soldiers were making a noise in

"What are they doing?" asked the General. "They are praying now, but have been singing," was the reply.

"And is that a crime?" the General de manded: "The articles of war order punishment fo any unusual noise," was the reply.

"God forbid that praying should be an unusual noise in my camp," said General Jackson, with much feeling, and advised the officer to join with them. There is an old proverb which declares that none can tell where the shoe pinches save he that wears it. The maxim has a thousand applications. A husband who appears to have found his wife a good deal less of an angel than he had imagined in the days of his courtship, lets out some domestic secrets in the following graphic manner: I own that she has charming locks

I own that she has charming locks
That on her shoulders fall;
What would you say to see the box
In which she keeps them all?—
Her taper fingers, it is true,
Are difficult to match;
I wish, my friend, you only knew
How terribly they scratch!

SINGULAR EFFECT OF AN EARTHQUAKE. The Portland Courier is informed on the most reliable authority, of a most singular and unprecedented circumstance which took place in connection with the late earthquake. A mar-ried woman residing not a thousand miles from Yarmouth, in this State, but whose husband has been absent about two years, was delivered of a healthy and sprightly child, shortly after the shock.

TTALIAN AND AMERICAN SKIES .- Arthur, in his work on Italy, says:

"After all that we say of an Italian sky, it is not equal to that of Egypt, nor to that of many parts of America. The most ravishing dome of blue sky my eyes ever looked upon, was from Mt. Auburn, near Boston; and the most exquisite sunrise was over the waters of most exquisite sunrise was over the waters of most exquisite sunrise was over the waters of June 21.
