THE MOTE BROKER-THE GAMBLER-THE SWINDLER.

During the past week the police have had in charge several important swindling cases in New York, which involve the loss of several thousands of dollars, but as yet have only succeeded in arresting one of the alleged optaining about $5,000 from a respectable house in Pine street. The alleged party accessed of swindle is a young man named Wm Hurry, Jr., note broker, late doing business at No. 1 Pine street. It seems that he is charged by the firm of Quick & L'Hommedieu dealers in mercantile notes and foreign exchange, No. 42 Pine street—with having, on Friday last called upon them—having pre-Friday last, called upon them—having pre-viously done business with them—and inquired if they had an $8,000 note that they wanted to sell, remarking that he could dispose of a note of the said amount, as he had a customer in waiting.

Mr. L'Hommedieu replied that he had, and gave Hurry an $8,000 note. Hurry, it is alleed, took it, and saying he would return in about twenty minutes, left the office. He, however, failed to return, and it is alleged that, after disposing of the note, he procured a draft on the Bank of the Republic for the full amount, proceeded direct to the bank, drew the amount in cash and left. His not returning created some little suspicion on the part of Messrs. Quick & L'Hommedieu, and, on the following day, not being able to ascertain Hurry's whereabouts, they proceeded before Justice Welsh, where a complaint was made against him. Hurry, the same afternoon, from his own story, finding himself the holder of this large sum of money, concluded to visit some of our leading gambling saloons and try his luck at the game of faro. His first step was to dive into the well-known establishment cor-ner of Broadway and Fulton street, where a day game is always kept going, and after bet-ting several times he lost about $3,000. He ting several times he lost about $3,000. He again restored to all its virulence by again then took a look into a sporting house in Andrews he dissolving it in water. There appears to be ne street, where, after passing an hour, he he lost $200. In company with a friend he then proceeded to a first class restaurant, and after enjoying a costly supper started out again for the gamboling table. It being early in the evening, a short visit was made to the sweat-board kept at the corner of Broadway and Prince street, where he was so fortunate as to win about $1,000 .- Thinking that he had done pretty well, he concluded to try another house, and accordingly made a stop at an establishment corner of Prince and Mercer streets, where, at the game of faro, he lost

Hurry, on Saturday evening, again sallied forth on a visit to his old haunts, visiting a gambling house, corner of Twelfth street and Proadway, where they soon relieved him of $500, and at another, corner of Broadway and Eighth streets, he lost the like amount. Sunday night he again made a tour around town, visiting a place in Broadway, where he was fortunate in winning about $1,500. He also visited another of the gamboling hells, where he remained until nearly four o'clock

Monday morning, gaining about $500.
On Monday Mr. M'Hommedieu called upon Mr. Chris. V. Hogan, of the detective force, and made him acquainted with the facts and requested him to work up the case, and grees above the freezing point. Why is this? if possible to arrest Hurry. Mr. Hogan accordingly set to work, and asertaining that ue fluctates in its temperature with every pas been a visitor to the above places. concluded that he had an accomplice with him. He succeeded in finding a beautiful team that the young gentleman had obtained, with a view of sporting about in, and finally traced him to the above hotel, where he arrested him yesterday afternoon, in room number 15. Hurry, when confronted by the detective, seemed greatly surprised, believeing that he had evaded all pursuit of the officers. He was taken to the police head-quarters, where he is now detained, awaiting examination before Justice Kelly. About $4,000 of of the money has been recovered by the officer, who! has shown himself both efficient and invaluable by the prompt manner in which he succeeded in arresting the accused. Hurry is about 28 years of age, and is very respectably connected, his father being well known as one of our leading merchants. full examination is to be had in the case.

Removal of the Remains of Columbus.

It is stated from Havana that the remains of Christopher Columbus, the discoverer of the New World, are again to be removed to a new and splendid cemetery soon to be opened near that city. They are to be deposited in a silver urn, upon which will be inscribed in letters of gold, the most remarkable events of his great enterprise. A bronze statue is also to be erected over them, representing the great discoverer in the act of revealing the grand mission of his wonderful life. Columbus died Ascension day, the 20th of May, 1506, in about the 70th year of his age. His obsequies were celebrated with great pomp at Valladolid, and his body deposited in the convent of San Francisco. Thence, nine years after, in the year 1513, it was removed the Carthusian monastery of Seville, where likewise was de-posited the body of his son Diego. Twenty-ty-three years after, in the year 1536, the bodies of both the Admiral and his son were removed with appropriate pomp and ceremonies to the new world he had discovered, and interred in the principal city of San Domingo, Hispaniola. There they remained undisturbed for a period of 259 years.

In the year 1795, however, at the close of the war between France and Spain, all the Spanish possessions in the Island of Hispaniola were ceded to France, whereupn a request was preferred to the French Governor to have the remains of Columbus removed to Cuba. The request was granted, and on the 20th of The request was granted, and on the 20th of December, 1795, the vault in the cathedral of San Domingo was for the first time in nearly three hundred vears opened. "Within," says the record of the event, "were found the fragments of a leaden coffin, a number of bones, and a quantity of mould, evidently the remains of a human body. These were carefully colledted and put in a case of gilded lead, about half an ell in length and breadth, and a third in height, secured by an iron lock the key of which was delivered to the Archbishop. The case was enclosed in a coffin, covered with black velvet, and ornamented with lace and fringed gold."

On arriving at the out us, there shall still be a calm, unchangmole; the remains were met by the Governor of the Island, accompanied by his General and military staff. The coffin was then con veyed between files of soldiery, which lined the streets to the obelisk, in the Place d'Armes, where it was received in a hearse prepared for the purpose. Here the remains were for-mally delivered to the Governor and Captain

The ceremony concluded, the solemn rites to the dead were performed by the Archish-op, and the remains of the great discoverer were again deposited in the wall, on the right side of the grand alter of the Cathedral of Havana, where they have ever since remain-

The Poison of Rattlesnakes.

At the last meeting of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell made a very interesting communication on the subject of the poison of the rattlesnake. After adverting to the history of the various works on venomous reptiles, he profang in such a position when not required for use, as not to interfere with the feeding of the snake, and then the manner in which it was pushed forward and brought into the pomuscles by which the fang was drawn back and thrust forward, and showed how one of them, while erecting and fixing the fang, at duct leading through the tooth to the bottom of the wound, or besides it and into the sur face of the same. He then explained the position of the poison gland and its duot, and showed the manner in which this duct com-the same time, as soon as it had pierced the animal bitten, compressed the poison gland and forced the poison out, either through the municated with the one leading through the tooth, and the manner in which the poison was prevented from flowing out when the fang was not erected. When the fangs are torn away they are soon replaced by others; in-deed they appear to be regularly shed by the animal, so that it gives no security against fatal bite that the fangs have been removed. The poison is contained in the poison gland in a considerable quantity, as much as 10 to 14 drops having been procured from a single one from a snake about four feet long. It is of a pale greenish color, and its activity is not impaired by keeping for years. It may be swallowed, if the skin of the mouth and throat be not broken, with impunity. Its poisonou properties are not destroyed by boiling or freezing. After it has been dried it may b no absolute antidote to it. The most successful plan is to give some powerful stimulant, such as spirits of ammonia. When the spirits are given, it is necessary to keep up the stim-ulus fully for a considerable time. The quantity sometimes taken without producing intoxication, is very great; in one case specified, three pints of strong spirits were given. The doctor remarked, however, that at one of our military posts it was common for the men to be bitten by rattlesnakes, so long as the whisky cure was used, but when different and nauseous stimulants were substituted, the dry at all times. bites rapidly diminished in frequency.

A Man's Body a Living Stove.—The Elecric Review, treating of the caloric or heat in human body, compares our body to a living stove—walking fire-places—furnaces in the flesh, if those terms can be applied to any apparatus for the express production of human caloric. After stating the fact of the latent heat of the human frame, the writer says: Suppose it to be the month of January, when winter is presumed to be reigning in full vigor, and every inanimate object appears to have been drained of its caloric; still the human How does it happen that while a bronze statsing breeze, the living organism maintains its standard heat unimpaired, and preserves its tropical climate within, although the air should be full of frost and the ground enveloped in snow? It is manifest that we must have some power of "brewing" caloric for ourselves. Assuming that our bodies are veritable stoves, the reviewer proceeds to explain where we procure our fuel. Fortunately our coal and fire—wood, he adds, are stored up in a very interesting form. They are laid before us in the shape of bread and butter, pudding and pies, rashers of bacon for the la-borer, and haunches of venison or turtle soup for the epicure. Instead of being brought up in scuttles, they are presented in tureens, dishes or tumblers, or all of them in pleasing tended. Speaking seriously, and looking at the question from a mere human point of view, could any project appear more hopeless than one for burning fuel in a soft, delicate fabric like the human body—a fabric composed, for the most part, of mere fluids-a fabric that might be easily scorched by excess of heat, or damaged by excess of cold? Does it not might be easily scorched by excess of heat, or damaged by excess of cold? Does it not appear like a touch of Quixotism in nature to design a stove with flesh for its walls, veins for its flues, skin for its covering? Yet here the state of we have seen is an apparatus which, as if by magic, produces a steady stream of heat, not trickling penuriously from the fountains, but flowing on day and night, winter and summer, without a moment's cessation from January to December. Carry this splendid machine to the coldest regions on the globe—set it up in a region where the frosts are so crushing that nature seems trampled dead—it still pours on its mysterious supplies with unabated profusion. It is an apparatus, too, which does its work unwatched and is a great measure unaided .-The very fuel which is thrown into it in random heaps is internally sifted and sorted, so that the true combustle elements are conveyed to their place and applied to their duty with unerring precision. No hand is needed to trim its fires, to temper its glow, to remove its ashes. Smoke there is none, spark there is none, flame there is none. The pulmonary, chimney is never clogged with human grime. All is so delicately managed that the fairest skin is neither shriveled nor blackened by the burning within. Is this apparatus placed in circumstances which rob it too fast of its calo ric? Then the appetite becomes clamerous or food, and in satisfying its demands the ration are flung open, and the surface is laid under water until the fires within are reduced to their wonted level.

Assailed on the one hand by heat, the hody resists the attempt, if resistance be possible, until the store of moisture is dissipated; assailed on the other by cold, it keeps the enemy at bay until the hoarded stock of fuel is expended. Thus protected, thus provisioned let us ask whether these human hearths are not entitled to rank among the standing mar-After appropriate funeral ceremonies, the body was taken on board the ship San Loren-that, let the climate be mild or rigorous, let the wind blow from the sultry desert or come loaded with polar sleet, let the fluctations of ing, undying summer within us.

How a Negro Came to Steal Turkeys .-A story is told of Dick, a darkey in Kentucky who was a notorious thief, so vicious in this respect that all the thefts in the neighbormally delivered to the Governor and Captain General of the Island, the key given up to him, the coffin opened and examined, and the safe transportation of its contents authentica.

The ceremony concluded, the solemn rites fold where charged to him. On one occasion, Mr. Jones, a neighbor of Dick's master, called and said that Dick must be sold out of that part of the country, for he had stolen all his (Mr. Jones') turkeys. Dick's master could not think so. The two, however, went into the dead were necessary and the field where Dick were at work and the field where Dick were charged to him.
