Strange Adventure with Burglars.

The Messrs. Herbert kept a very extensive jewelry establishment in New York city, and for the better security of their store against fire and other casualties, they employed one of their clerks to sleep in it at night. The idea of the store being attacked by robbers was not for a moment entertained, but it was for other objects, such as security from fire, and the like, that young Loring, the clerk, slept there; for he was not supplied with any weapons to re-pel an attack of thieves. But one dark, dreary night he was awakened by a singular noise which resembled that which a party of burglars might produce in an attempt to enter the building, and looking towards the back win-dows he soon satisfied himself that one or more persons were endeavoring, as quietly as possible, to effect an entrance at that quarter.— They had already removed a part of the sash and shutters with their cunningly devised instruments, and must have been at work some time before he was awakened. Now young Loring regretted that he had no weapon, but not through fear—that was not a characteristic of the young gentleman-but that he might pepper the rogues a little. At first he determined to cry out and arouse the watch, but as they had advanced so far before he was awake, he thought he would drive them off by stratagem. He slipped on his clothes quietly, and, approaching the spot where the thieves were busy, he saw the hand of one of them passed inside of the shutter into the store in its owner's endeavors to guide a small handsaw with which he was cutting an aperture for his body to pass through. Young Loring felt inclined to crop off the hand with a small hatchet that lay hard by, but he refrained, and bethought himself of a powerful acid that was used in the testing of the purity of silver and other metals. One drop of this would cat instantly into the flesh, and produce a poisonous soro in ten minutes' time. He cautiously dropped a little upon the burglar's hand and

"Fudge!" replied his companion, "change hands then, but don't stop. Take the saw yourself, then! I can't stand this pain!" And while the discomfitted burglar with drew to groan over the supposed cut, the othor took his place with the saw, and in a moment after received a few drops of the fiery liquid upon the back part of his hand, and was soon groaning with agony.

The burglar addressed as Bill thrust his hand in once more to wrench off the last piece of clerk, having already armed himself with a large pair of pinchers, seized the robber's hand as though in a vice, and set up such a barking that the whole neighborhood was alarmed.
"For Heaven's sake, Jack, lend us a hand here; the cursed animal is biting my hand half off!" said the burglar to his confederate. Pull it away-pull it away, quick."

"Give it a jerk!" said the other.
"O-o-o! I can't. Murder, murder!"

Cock Fighting.—This cruel pastime was prohibited in England, by Edward III, as early as 1365, and, in after times, by Henry VIII, and Cromwell. When those poor toads, the Stuarts, came to the crown, cock fighting was all the rage. In the reign of James I there was a cock-pit, on part of the site of Drury Lane Theatre. Another cock-pit was erected at Whitehall, by that interesting creations and the darkies commenced seating each other violently on the ground. There was a bag, on the floor of the vehicle, upon which, my friend, as he stepped in, was about placing his feet-when the General exclaimed—Good God—take care—you'll kill my cocks!" When they reached the ground, General Jackson entered the pit, adjusted the gaffs and started his bird. He was not victorious; and a fellow, of very vulgar appearance, clapped the future President, on his back, and said-" Well Ginral, yer don't allers beat. do yer?—Adrian.

It was attended to, and the bottle delivered by a porter. Soon after the hell of the livered by a porter. Soon after the bell of the room was rung with a clatter, and clerk Henrie; thinking something was wrong, answered the summons in person. When he entered the room the young husband was examining the uncorked wine bottle most indignantly.—

Turning to the Clerk he exclaimed.

'See here, this wine ain't right." "Why not?" asked the clerk. you it is the best port we have in the house, and a superior article at that."

"That may all be true, but it ain't right .-You see we are celebrating our wedding, and we want the right stuff. I don't know whethor you call it port or not, but we want that kind of wine where the cork pops out and the liquor biles up like soapsuds." A bottle of champagne was furnished, which rendered satisfaction.

Don't Get Discouraged.

Don't get discouraged! Who ever gained anything by drawing down the corners of his mouth when a cloud came over the sun, or letting his head drop like a lead weight into his shoes when misfortunes came upon him? Why, man, if the world knocks down and jostles past you in its great race, don't sit whining under people's feet but get up, rub you elbows, and begin again. There re some people who even to look at is worse, you do happen to be a little puzzled on the than a dose of chamomile tea. What if dollar-and-cent question? Others beside you have stood in exactly the same spot, and struggled bravely out of it, and you are neither halt, lame, nor blind, that you cannot do likewise! The weather may be dark and rainy -very well, laugh between the drops and and think cheerily of the blue sky and sunshine that will surely come to-morrow! Business may be dull; make the best of what you have, and look forward to something more hopeful. If you catch a fall, don't lament over your bruises, but be thankful that no bones are broken. If you can't afford roas beef and plum pudding, eat you codfish joy-fully, and bless your stars for the indigiestion and dyspepsia you thereby escape! But the moment you begin to groan over your troubles and count up the calaminites, you may as well throw yourself over the docks and be done with it. The luckiest fellow that ever might have woes enough, if he set himself seriously to work looking them up. The are like invisible specks of dust; you don't see them till you put on your spectacles to discover what is a great deal better let alone?

Don't get discouraged, little wife? Life is not long enough to spend inflaming your eyes and reddening your nose because the pudding won't bake, and your husband says the new shirts you worked over so long "set like meal bags." Make another pudding—begin the the shirts anew! Don't feel "down in the mouth" because dust will settle and clothes will wear out, and crockery will get broken. Being a woman don't procure you an exemption from trouble and care; you have got to fight the battle of life as well as your hus band, and it will never do to give up without a bold struggle. Take things as they come, good and bad together, and whenever you feel inclined to cry, just change your mind and laugh!—Keep the horrors at arm's length; never turn a blessing round to see if sind and laugh!—Keep the horrors at arm's ength; never turn a blessing round to see if that got a dark side to it and always take for granted that things are pleasing until hey prove to be something else.

Never allow yourself to get discouraged, t for granted that things are pleasing until they prove to be something else Never allow yourself to get discouraged, and you'll find the world a pretty comfortable sort of a place after all.
