To make Superphosphate of Lime.

This is the season of the year when preparations should be made for the manufacture of this valuable manure. It is a product, which, as stated by Prof. Anderson, of Edin-burg, depends on the existence of two differerent compounds of phosphoric acid and lime, one of which contains three times as much lime as the other. That which contains the larger quantity of lime is found in the bones, and all other natural phosphates, and is quite insoluble in water; but when two thirds of this lime are removed it is converted into the other compound; which is exceedingly soluble. This change is effected by the use of sulphuric acid, which combines with twothirds of the lime of the ordinary insoluable phosphate of lime, and converts it into biphate of lime, which is soluble. If to 100lbs of common phosphate of lime the requisite quantity of oil of vitrol be added, 64lbs of biphosphate, containing the whole of the phosphoric acid (the valuable constituent) are ob-tained, the remaining 36lbs, consist of lime, which, combining with the sulphuric acid, produces 8710s, of dry-sulphate of lime, or 00lbs. of the ordinary sulphate or gypsum. This is a minimum which can be present, but in actual practice it is liable to be exceeded. By employing a sufficiency of sulphuric acid the whole quantity of phosphoric acid in the phosphate may thus be brought into a soluble state, but in actual practice it is found preferable to leave part of it in an insoluble condition, as where it is entirely soluble its etfeet is too great during the early period of the season, and deficient at the end. In order to dissolve bones, bone ash, or mineral phosphates they are mixed with from a third to a half their weight of sulphuric acid of specific gravity 1.70 (140 Twaddle.) When mineral hosphates, and particularly coprolites are used the sulphuric acid must be increased, so as to compensate for the loss of that which is consumed in decomposing the carbonate of lime they contain. When operating on a small scale, the materials are put, in a vessel of wood, stone or lead (iron is to be avoided as it is rapidly corroded by the acid) and mixed with a sixth to a fourth of their weight of water, which may, with advantage be used hot. The sulphuric acid is then added and mixed as uniformly as possible. Considerable effervescence takes place, and the mass becomes extremely hot. At the end of two or three days it is turned over with a spade, and after standing for some days longer erally becomes pretty dry. Should it still be too moist to be sown it must be again turned over, and mixed with some dry substance to absorb the moisture. For this purpose everything containing lime or its carbonates must be carefully avoided, as they bring back the phosphates to the insoluble state, and undo what the sulphuric acid has done. Peat, saw-dust, sand, decaying leaves, or sim-fine dust which has passed through the sieve, to dry up the mass. -Scientific American. The Best Vinegar in Twenty-four Hours.-The following from the Scientific American, which is no doubt just as stated, is commend ed to the attention of all families who desire good vinegar. The directions here given, place its manufacture within the easy of all, for the process is simple as it can be. The whole philosophy of the manufacture of vinegar is included in the word oxidation, the alcohol contained in eider, beer or wine, combining with the oxygen of the atmosphere, becomes acctic acid, which in a deluted state ilar substances, will answer the purpose, and they should all be made perfectly dry before being used. An excellent plan is to sift the bones before dissolving, to apply the acid to the coarser part, and afterward to mix in the is vinegar.

The methods usually pursued in the domestic manufacture of this article are, to say the least of them, susceptible of improvement.-The conversion of cider into good vinegar, by exposure to the air in casks, requires weeks and even months to accomplish; because, only a small surface is exposed at one time to the oxydizing action of the atmosphere.

By exposing a larger surface of the liquor to the atmosphere, oxydation takes place with corresponding rapidity, and the process may corresponding rapidity, and the process may to forty-cight.

The method of accomplishing this rapid acctification, which has long been known to scientific men and manufacturers, may be pursued without difficulty in private houses, as follows: Take a clean flour barrel, and bore auger holes all around the sides, and in the bottom: set it over a flat tub or open cask. and fill it light with beech shavings which have been soaked in vinegar. On top of this barrel, which is open, lay two strips of wood, and resting on these, a pail filled with cider, beer at CITY PRICES. DRESS GOODS of every value tention of purchasers. or the like. Procure 12 or 15 lengths of cotton wicking, about 30 inches long; which after dipping in the liquid, arrange round the sides of the pail at regular intervals so that one end of each wick will be hanging in the cider and the other hanging down outside, and below the bottom of the pail. By means of these wicks the pail will gradually be emptied of its contents, which, trickling over the shavings, will be exposed to the air, absorb expendingly, and finally be received in the tub beneath. By returning the liquor into the pail above, and suffering this trickling process.

Seeding Orchards to Clover .- One of our correspondents asks if seeding an orchard to clover will be very injurious to the trees?-The pratice of seeding down young orchards to grass cannot be too strong condemned; but after the trees are ten or twelvo years of age, and have formed strong main roots, and commenced bearing fruit, it is rather good policy to seed down to grass; leaving the sod, however, only for a couple of years, before again ploughing and cropping with hoed crops. In seeding to grass we with hoed crops. In seeding to grass we advice sowing grass seed alone, in the factory of the solution of the solution of the seed alone, in the factory of the seed alone, in the seed alone, in the factory of the seed alone, in the factory of the seed alone, in the seed alone, in the factory of the seed alone, in the seed alone, in the factory of the seed alone alone in the seed alone but after the trees are ten or twelve years a young orchard. Of the grasses, the common red clover is as little injurious as any: for it red clover is as little injurious as any; for it obtaines a considerable portion of its nourishment from the atmosphere, by means of its ment from the atmosphere, by husting of its coarse, broad leaves. Orchard grass is the next least injurious, and those who have practiced sowing both together, say the results are profitable in the hay crop, and if not left too long in sod not injurious to the orchard trees. By some cultivators it is claimed that the longevity and hardihood of the tree is increased by an occasional seeding down to the grasses we have named. They aver that it checks the too exuberant; tender growth consequent on a high state of hoed crop cultivation, and creates a more firm texture and har, the season advances. All Goods warranted to be dihood of wood .- Ohio Farmer.

The Bountiful Fruit Prospect .- It is gratifying fact—gratifying to every individ-ual in the community, (for all are benefitted by it)—that we are having, and are about to by it)—that we are having, and are about to have once more, a general fruit year. Strawberries we have had; and such strawberries!

Never, within our recollection, has there been such a bountiful abundance of the fine sized, well dayaged and well respectfully announce to the public that he will continue the Hatting Business at the old stand, in West High Street, and with a renewwell navored, and well matured berries.—
They were in fact a perfect drug in our markots, and sold in many cases at prices that would not pay for their picking. The prospect for other small fruits is equally flattering Of apples, pears, peaches, &c., there is such promise of abundance as must gladden the heart of every lover of fruit.

With so many sick and wounded soldiers to take care of, this plethora of fruits will come into most happy play.

A Great Cabbage Story.—The California Furmer, of April 11, says: "We know a case where a farmer having a good lot of cabbage is now selling them from $7 to $8 the hundred its.; from this crop alone he will realize some $12,000 to $15,000 for cabbages raised the past autmumn."
