Mr. C. water, then pan on the fire, pouring it in slowly, and stirring it constantly to prevent lumps, with a perforated wooden paddle, so as to produce perfect incorporation. After boiling thirty minutes, the prepared uncilage or gruel is fit for use, and should be given blood or luke warm to the calves, mixing it in small quantities at first with milk, say one-fourth mucilage with three-fourths milk, progressively increasing it, so that by the end of a fortnight it will be in equal parts; by the end of the third week, one and a half mucilize to one part milk; by the end of the fourth week the mucilage may be given in double the quantity of milk, and skim milk substituted for new milk; and by the end of the eixth week, the mucilage will be gradually reduced, so that by that time they may be fell wholly on mucilage, till they are fifteen or wholly on mucilage, till they are fifteen or sixteen weeks old, when they may be weaned. During all this time, if too early in the season to put out the calves, they should be comfortably housed, well ventialed, and kept perfectly sweet and clean; a little sweet hay tied in bundles and suspended, so that they may play with it and learn to nibble and eat it; and a little pounded chalk, mixed with salt, given in troughs to lick at pleasure, which prevents acidity in the stomach, and the due formation of cud. Small lumps of linseed cake should be given in other froughs, which they will soon learn to suck, if a little pains are taken to put a bit in their mouths after they have taken their meals of milk and mucilage. When housed it will be advisable to have a separate pen for each calf of suffi-cient size to walk about, so that they do not get into the habit of sucking each other and swallowing the hair, which, united with the curd by the regurgitating process going on the stomach, forms round balls which are indigestible, and is the fertile cause of the death of many promising animals. The following scale of quantity of milk or milk and muchage combined for each calf may be useful, but should be altered according to circumstances: For the first week the calf may get from three to four quarts daily; for the second week, four to five quarts; fifth and sixth weeks, eight to ten quarts; six to eight weeks food per day, but make it up by giving them finely cut roots, dry oat meal, &c; but the an imals are much too young for such food, though they may get the mineed roots so as to train them into their use. Hay tea is an admirable thing also to mix with the mucilage and milk, as it contains a large amount of nutriment in a soluble form.

A WELL TRAINED SERVANT .- The follow lowing reminds us of a little anecdote which we think we will tell first, so as to be a little ahead of our friend who narrates it : A couple of friends, sportsmen, fond of shooting and fishing, were on a trouting ex-cusion, in the month of May, some four or five years ago.

When they left the rude hotel in the morning, where they had passed the night, they agreed to separate in pursuing their day's sport; and an agreement was made to ren-dezvous at the tavern at sunset, and compare the result of the day's labor or 'sport,' as it is generally called.

Well, about dusk one of the party arrived. and soon after the other, and they comppared their strings of fish. One greatly predominated; it consisted of
