Z. Breed, Esq., writes for the New Hamp shire Journal of Agriculture, upon the subject of "Dairy Farming," as follows: There has been, and always will be, a desire with a dairyman to possess cows of su-perior milking qualities. With the present knowledge of the laws of breeding there would appear to be no insurmountable obsta-cles in the way of success in this direction. By judicious breeding an inferior race may be thoroughly changed, and a breed produced with superior qualities, not hardly noticeable in the original race. It may be well here to remark that the term race and breed have distinctive meanings. There now before the public three distinct races and three distinct breeds. Theraces are the Devons, Jerseys, and Galoways. Others exist, but do not claim much attention at the present time. A race is a native of some country. The Devons are natives of Devenshire; the Jerseys of France, and the Galoways of Scotland. Durhams, Ayershires, and Herefords are breeds produced by work ing on the members of an original race. Dur-hams and Herefords were bred for beef, and the Ayershires for the dairy. These breeds are always tending back to their native race, and with careless breeding and poor keeping, would take rapid strides downwards.

The present celebrated breed of milkers called the Ayershires originated in the called the Ayershires originated in the Southwest part of Scotland, in the county of Ayr, tlip home of Robert Bruce. The stock from which this breed was produced is said to have been of small size, well shaped, to have been of small size, well shaped, ill fed, and yielding but little milk. They were mostly black, with more or less stripes of white. Their yield of milk was not often over eight quarts per day.

From 1750 to 1767 there was some good stock introduced into the county of Ayr by some of the large land owners. Being of larger size, and the cows giving more milk, the farmers were naturally interested in them, and they sought crosses between the two breeds. The dairyman of Ayr were small tenants, and the damand for dairy products made it for their interest to improve their cows. They bred from the offspring of their best milkers, and such as did not suit them for the dairy were turned over to the butcher. They not only selected the best cows for breeders, but they were particular about their bulls. They were selected with especial reference to the feminine make of the head and neck. Their aim was the dairy bull instead of the beef bull. The present breed of THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AF Ayrshires is the legitimate result of especial breeding. It is a practical demonstration of the law of nature. It points the way to sure improvement. In this breeders can see

Large stories are told of the products of some of the Glasgow dairies. One man is said to have realized $250 in seven months from one cow. Some cases they say pay their owners $1 per day for six months of the year. Six hundred gallons annually is claimed as an average yield. Some have been known to Old or Young, Single, Married or Congive one thousand gallons in one year. Four llons of milk will make a pound and a half of butter. The first cow imported into Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Society for of butter. The first eow imported into Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Society for the Promotion of Agriculture, in 1837, yielded sixteen pounds of butter per week, for several weeks, fed on grass only. A Glasgow dairman, who kept from two to three hundred caws, found by experiment that the Ayrshires were preferable to any others. He gives the world the hearst of his experiment of the proposition of Dissipation, or in the world the benefit of his experience and observation as follows:

"The most approved shape and marks of a good dairy cow are: head swell, long, and narrow toward the muzzle; herns small, clear, bent, and placed at considerable distance from each other; eyes not large, but brisk and lively; neck slender and long, tapering toward the head, with a loose skin below; shoulders and fore quarters light and thin: hind quarters large and broad: back straight, and joints slack and open careass deep in the ribs, tail small and long, reaching to the heels; legs small and short, with firm joints; udder square, but a little oblong, stretching forward, thin skinned and capacious, but not long hung; teats small, inting outwards, and at a considerable distance from each other; milk veins capacious and prominent, skin loose, thin and soft like a glove; hair short, soft and woolly general figure, when in flesh, handsome and well proportioned." Here we have a particular pen and ink Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Guring Strictures of the Urentral of a good cows that do not possess all ing and Guring Strictures of the Urethra. of these qualities. The editor of the Ohio Farmer, in his off-hand style, writes as follows on the points of cows:

"A cow, to be a good milker, must have good form, firm and compact bones, broad udder, mellow hide, seft hair, and gentle feminine look. Great, thick bones are gentlessed for the compact of the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage. erally spongy, and mark the character of the perhaps after Marriage. animal. If spongy, then the animal is a course half-formed concern, that has no richness of body, mind or production. If the bones are large and compact they show her to be too masculine, and that her appropriate place is at the plow rather than in the milk stall. From such an animal a tolerable article of milk and water may be obtained, but it is useless to look for good milk. So, too, a cow with a large, clumsy head, dull eyes, and stay horns, should be killed or sold, but never kept for milk. As well may we look for refinement in a woman with such eyes as for the qualities required in a cow in such an animal as we have described. For a good cow there should be as much mildness, amiability and beauty, in the head, eyes, and countenance, as in lovely woman. It is not all nonsense to say, "A good cow should be as pretty as a school ma'am."

It is with this as with every other branch of farming-practice makes perfect.

"GROW MORE WOOL."-This cry is heard throughout the land. A gentleman writes from New York to the Cleaveland Wool-Grower & Manufacturer, as follows:

The manufacture of wool in this country require more of the raw material grown here an is done. Is it not a singular fact that servation. while we are exporting food to all quarters of the globe, produced in the West and brought here for shipment at great expense, we are importing wool fourteen thousand miles transportation as well as from Great Britain, where the annual rent of land is as much as a freehold per acro is in Wisconsin and other thin no narcotic, no mercury, or other injurious great States. We shall consume this year sixty million pounds of foreign wool, at the same million pounds of foreign wool, at the sam time the home grower never prospered as highly and his prospects for the coming crop are brilliant. Good farming requires an abundance of sheep, and in my observation, of too long a period to be written, I have never known a skillful wool-grower who did not make it profitable
