General Gardner had before expressed his determination to hold out to the last ex. oath and go home, can do so. Some of the tremity, and seemed sanguine both to the officers refuse to take the parole, and will nitimate succees of the Confederate arms holding Mississippi, and his own ability to defend his works until he should be relieved "by an attack upon Gen. Banks' rear. The intelligence of Gen. Grant's splendid triumph at Vicksburg, bowever, and the tand advance of a strong column into the intertior of Mississippi, cutting off his expected relief, speedily dispelled Gen. Gardner's hopes. Disheartened and discouraged by the news he had received, Gen. Gardner surrendered his force, unconditionally, on the morning of July 8th. The garrison consisted of 6,000 effective men in excellent condition. There were sixty pieces of artillery in the various bat along the river and in the rear of the place, many of them of large calibre. The magazine contained an abundant supply of powder, but a small quantity of shell and all the time, tearing his bair, and giving all shot. The deficiency accounts for the reb-"el fire having been so slack during the last two or three days of the siego. Gen. Gard-'ner was evidently husbanding his resources 'to repel an anticipated assault, and had an abundant supply to have worked all his all unbiased persons at Vicksburg. guns for several days continually, without exhausting his supply. There was no beef in the possession of the rebels at Port Hudson at the time of the surrender. The flesh of mules had been dealt out for some days, in short rations, to supply the want of beef. There was quite a number of mules inside the rebel works, and an abundance of corn to have sustained the garrison for weeks longer, if they had bad the heart to fight.

General Gardner is reported to have said after the surrender, that he expected Gen. Grant, with his army, would come down from Vicksburg, and that, in that event, 'hi, works would be assaulted and overpow-ered by superior numbers, and many of his 'men would be 'bayoneted in the trenches before a surrender could be made. General Herron's fine command, which, you will remember, is the Army of the Frontier, operating on the South-western Missouri, line and lately attached to Grant's army, started this morning for Port Hudson 'On meeting the Arzona the fleet of trans on their way up the Yazoo fiver. They 150 REBELS KILLED AND DROWNED-1,000 will proceed as high as Yazoo city, and perhaps higher. General Herron's force is large enough to operate with advantage if an enemy can be found in that quarter.

believed in secession, had never been a secessionist, and had never been in favor of the rebellion. His wife, who was present, said his course had ruined her, and there need be no fears that he would act disloya n future. The condition of General Pemberton is pitiable in the extreme. His officers falsely and meanly ascribe his misfortune to all while he, poor man, is nearly crazy, and evinces in an unmistakable manner the humiliation and anguish he feels. PHILADELPHIA, August 23rd, 1862 Messre Jones & Ecans.-Well, gontlemen, your Hoofland's Gorman Bittors has saved my life. There is no mistake in this. It is vouched for by numbers of my comrades, some of whose names are appended, and who were fully cognizant of all the circumstances of my case.
