Poetical.

AWAY TO THY HOME IN THE GLADE.

BY MRS. E. P. HERRIDGE HAYES.

Away to thy home in the glade,
For the track of the red man is there;
And thy wife listens faint and dismayed,
As their war-cries ring out on the air;

While thy children have ceased from their play,
And an shriek to the spirit hath demanded;
O, why didst thy father delay,
Who the savage had come with the night?

And well might the rascal-chiefs cheer,
In that perilous hour grow pale;
And well might those helpless ones shriek,
As the war-whoop is filling the vale.

Then turn from the buffalo chase,
And fly to thy home in the glade,
O, the scalp of thy loved one will grace
The wigwags of deacon-like men.

How swift bear me onward, good steed,
To the death of my dearest delay;
Fail me not in the hour of need,
We must come with the dawn of the day.

The wild savage for little deemed
The horse and his rider were there;
And thy wife's sobs now never ceased,
Till the bullet had sped through the air.

And then over the prairie they flew,
Like the wind or the wolf-hound deer;
And thy wife's sobs now never ceased,
Though the angel of death had been near.

Then turn to the One in the skies,
With the hand of the spoiler hath demanded;
And let prayers of thanksgiving arise,
From the hearth of thy home in the glade.

ASPIRING GENIUS.

BY FANNY FIELDING.

"I'll choose a trade," a sensitive youth exclaims,
"An easy one, to quicken my talents—
That gives delight without hard labor's pains—
I'll thus escape our father Adam's curse."

"O! Mother Earth! I do not care to till;
'Twill spoil my hands so delicate and fine;
But of the best I'd eat and drink my fill,
Then push away at a long fragrant till."

"A stove-pipe had I'd place upon my head,
Above my hands I'd dress my white kid gloves;
In shoving them on I'd be so gently and slow,
My tailor's bills would gently, like the doves."

"My trade (poetish name) shall furnish me,
With everything that's needed for my trade;
My pen (poetish name) shall furnish me,
And gold accumulate at my command."

He thought of this and that—discarded both;
Then cast his thoughts o'er all earth's wide domains,
And settled down at last in faith—
"Was ever, who could prosper by his brain?"

An Infamous Act.

Two Young Girls Invited into a House of Prostitution.

On Wednesday morning last two young and genteel looking girls named Carr and Flowers, from Pittsburg, were invited into a house of prostitution by a man who called himself a member of the 187th regiment. Soon after their arrival the regiment was suddenly and unexpectedly ordered to leave for the front, and marched the same day, before the girls had an opportunity of commencing their journey. The result was that they found themselves in a strange city alone and unprotected, and without money to pay their way home.

While wandering around the depot in a disconsolate frame of mind, they were approached by a military officer, who seemed interested and designed to take advantage of their helpless condition. After a brief conversation with the girls, in which he expressed the warmest sympathy for them, he proposed to conduct them to a private boarding house where they would be entertained until such time as they could procure funds from home. Believing the man to be honest and sincere, they accepted his proposition, placed themselves under his protection, and were conducted by the designing villain to a respectable house in Cherry alley, known as the "soap factory." After their introduction into this den of iniquity, their pretended friend, throwing off all disguise, boldly avowed his object in taking them there and sought to accomplish his vile purpose; but the girls now aware of the true character of the house into which they had been inveigled, and roused to indignation by the deception practiced upon them, and the infamous proposition of the unprincipled scoundrel under whose protection they had placed themselves, firmly and successfully resisted his approaches, and completely foiled him at every point.

As soon as the girls could make their escape from the vile den they fled, and called upon Mayor Boufford, to whom they told their touching story, and claimed his protection. After a thorough investigation of the case the Mayor satisfied that the girls were innocent, and impressed with the truth of this statement, with his powerful hospitality entertained them at his own house and procured free passes for their transportation to Pittsburg, for which place they left on Friday night.

The officer who decoyed these girls into the lowest sink of iniquity in our city, and basely plotted their ruin, was the name of Ballman, who no doubt was a notorious one. The developments made by these young girls led to the arrest of the keepers of the "soap factory" and all the women connected with it—Harrisburg Union.

There is a great deal of dying for Iowa now-a-days, but it is generally of the worse kind.

Mrs. Tom Thumb, it is whispered, will be as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

A Thrilling Incident of the War.

We find in the Courier des Etats the following touching narrative of an incident in the siege of Charleston, taken from the Mercury of that city:

The Yankees from time to time throw a shell into the city, and nobody seems to mind it. But misfortune willed that yesterday a shell should throw the entire community into mourning.

Mrs. Anna Pickens, the daughter of our former Governor, never consented to leave the city. Despite the representations of General Beauregard, she remained, braving shells and Greek fire, tending the wounded and cheering all with her presence. Among the wounded officers under her care was Mr. Andrew de Rochelle, a descendant of one of the noblest Hugonot families of the city.

This young man was full of the liveliest gratitude for his fair nurse; gratitude gave birth to a most tender sentiment; his suit was listened to by General Pickens, who gave his consent, and the marriage was fixed for yesterday, the 23d of April.

Lieutenant de Rochelle was on duty at Fort Sumpter in the morning, and it was determined that the ceremony should take place at the residence of General Beauregard in the evening at seven o'clock. At the moment when the Episcopal clergyman was asking the bride if she was ready, a shell fell upon the roof of the building, penetrated to the room where the company was assembled, burst and wounded several persons, among the rest, Miss Anna Pickens.

We cannot describe the scene that followed. Order was at once re-established, and the wounded were removed, all except the bride, who lay motionless upon the carpet. Her betrothed, kneeling and bending over her, was weeping bitterly and was trying to staunch the blood that welled from a terrible wound under her left breast. A surgeon declared that Miss Pickens had not longer than two hours to live. Who will paint the general despair?

When the wounded girl recovered her consciousness, she asked to know her fate, and when she had been told that she was to die, she said, "I would give my life for the truth; if I must die, I can die worthy of you." The young soldier's tears were his answer, and Miss Anna, summoning all her strength, attempted to smile. Nothing could be more heroic than the scene which followed. The brave girl, struggling in the embrace of death and against a terrible mortal pang.

Governor Pickens, whose courage is known, was almost without consciousness, and Mrs. Pickens looked upon her child with the dry and hoarse voice of whose reason tottered.

Lieutenant de Rochelle was the first to speak. "Anna," he cried, "I will die soon, but I would have you to die my wife. There is yet time to unite us."

"The young girl did not reply, she was too weak. A slight flush rose for an instant on her pale cheek; it could be seen that joy and pain were struggling in her spirit for the mastery. Lying upon a sofa, her bridal dress stained with blood, her hair disheveled, she looked more beautiful than ever. Helpless as she was, Lieutenant de Rochelle took her hand and requested the Rev. Mr. Dickison to proceed with the ceremony.

When it was time for the dying girl to say "yes" her lips parted several times, but she could not articulate. At last the word was spoken, and a slight foam rested upon her lips. The dying agony was near. The minister sobbed as he proceeded with the ceremony. An hour afterwards all was over, and the bridal chamber was the chamber of death.

THRILLING ADVENTURE ON THE PLAINS.

A San Francisco print relates the circumstances of a most heroic and intrepid act, on the part of a lady, which was performed last month in the Indian country. About the 15th of March a telegram was received at Pittsburg in the papers, telling the story, to the effect that the Overland Mail stage coach had been attacked by Indians near Canon Station and the driver killed. On the 27th, a lady named Mrs. J. G. Smith, with her child, arrived in San Francisco from the East, via the Overland Route, and put up at the Occidental Hotel. She was the only passenger, beside her little one, in the very same coach on the box of which the driver was shot by a northern party, and the same day a section of the Press published the details of the attack.

She stated that the details of the attack, as narrated by this lady, are most thrilling, and herself the principal actor in them. Instantaneously with the news of the attack, Mrs. Smith, a German lady, set out on stage, leaving her child with her sister. At the same moment, four or five shots were fired by the Indians, one of which struck a horse in the head and he fell. She instantly dismounted, mounted the box, and seizing the reins, she drove the coach back to the driver on being shot, fell back into the boot behind the seat. The three horses were put to the top of their speed, and continued running for about two miles, when luckily they were saved by the timely arrival of a party of soldiers. In this there was a number of soldiers, who instantly came to the aid of the heroine, when she and her child were released from their perilous position. Mrs. G. was released by the women and of Indian etiquette; but her conduct during this frightful adventure exhibited courage and presence of mind rarely equalled, and never surpassed by the sternest sex. She is a native of Ohio, and had been on a visit to her Atlantic friends. She went North to join her husband, who is at present in Oregon.

PICTURES.—A room with pictures, and a room without pictures, differ about as much as a room with windows and a room without windows. Nothing is more melancholy, particularly in winter, than to see a room with windows in his room, than black walls and nothing on them, for pictures are loop holes of escape for the soul, leading to other scenes and spheres. It is such an inexpressible relief to a person engaged in his business, to go to a person who has to pass the time in his room, than black walls and nothing on them, for pictures are loop holes of escape for the soul, leading to other scenes and spheres.
