ICE HOUSES AND FILLING.

Our plan for an ice-house described on Our plan for an ice-house described on page 350 (November) was not intended for the cheapest one that would keep ice well, but for a good one in which the theory of the best way to keep ice is well carried out, and which would keep lee well on any soil and in any climate or exposure. The fact is that some of the cheapest, most carelessly knocked together houses, if the ice is only well packed, keep it excellently, while some built at great expense, which lack good drainage or ventilation, or something else, keep it but two or three months. drainage or ventilation, or something else, keep it but two or three months. Ice houses ought to be filled, if possible, in very cold weather, after the interior of the house has become thoroughly cold, and when the ice itself is not only perfectly dry, but very cold. It retains this cold a long time, and besides, if the cakes are well cut and closely packed, with the interior distribution of the with the interstices chinked full of ic dust or snow, a few pailfuls of water may be dashed on, which will immediately freeze and make the whole nearly a solid mass. Cakes thus frozen to gether, will nevertheless crack apart easily when the ice is needed in summer. The ice cakes should be cut with right angles, and of uniform sizes, so that the layers may fit the size of the house as nearly as possible, leaving about 6 inches all around, to be filled with straw or sawdust closely packed. s usually best to lay a bed of tanbark or straw, some three inches thick upon a level floor of boards, such as was described in the November number but if the floor be of rails or of boards haid unevenly upon the ground, the bed should be 6 or 8 inches thick. The floor should never be of matched boards. for it must allow water to pass through freely. In large ice houses the practice of setting the cakes of ice on the edges, is frequently advocated. We see no reason to prefer it in small houses, for if the ice be carefully packed, all the thawing will take place at the exterior of the mass. When filled, the ice should be covered with a thick layer of straw. American Agriculturist.

THE WOOLINTEREST.—There was an important meeting of wool growers and woolen manufacturers held at Syracuse, in December last, which was convened on this wise. The U.S. Revenue Com-mission called upon the National Man-ufacturers' Association for information in regard to the action of the present tariff on the wool interests. This body invited the different wool growers' associations to send delegates to meet their executive committee to confer upon the matter. The wool growers it seems did not like this quiet "conference meeting," and so proposed to send as large a num-ber of delegates as would attend from each society, and the manufacturers (in self-defence) called also for delegates rom different parts of the country.—
Thus a very considerable body of substantial and influential men, representing the wool growing and the wool manufacturing interests, were assembled. The only result of the discussion, which is of immediate moment, appears which is of immediate moment, appears to be that these gentlemen agree and urge upon the Revenue Commission that both these interests should have "equal encouragement and protection" on the part of the Government. Sundry matters relating to the intercourse between wool buyers and users, and wool growers and sellers were made the subjects of the discussion, it is to be hoped, to the mutual benefit of the two parties. This we hope will result in bringing wool growers and manufac-turers into more immediate connection, stablish fairer rates in the wool mar ket, and fairer practices on both sides. The opportunity thus afforded by the meeting at Syracuse of delegates from so many of the States, was embraced to form a "National Wool Growers' Association." This society it seems was born entirely unexpected (to outsiders at least) when the wool growers were "caucusing" and planning their mode of precedure before going into convention with the manufacturers. Rather, we may say, as Minerva sprang full armed from the brain of Jove, it was brought into existence by the felicitous thought of the master spirit of the oc-casion. Of course it elected officers, (it could do no less.) Hon. H. S. Randall, o Cortland Co., N. Y., is President; Wm. F. Green is Secretary; and Vice Presidents and an Executive Committee are elected. We hope prosperity and usefulness will attend the new So ciety, and that it will receive fully, as it has already to some extent, the endorsement of the wool growers' associations Was it to prevent any similar precipitate action on the part of cheese makers and mongers, that the N. Y. Cheese Makers Society changed its name and style to the "American Cheese Manufacturers Association?"

Cut Feed-Chaffed Hay, Straw, etc.

In these times of high prices, it seems needful to renew the inquiry whether more pains should not be taken to cut feed for stock. Careful experiments show that hay chopped fine affords about a quarter if not a third more nourishment that coarse hay. So then, if the gain is more than equivalent to the cost of the labor, it is good policy to cut hay. The reason cut feed goes so much far-ther than coarse is this: The woody fiber of the hay, after it is chopped fine, is more easily masticated, and is more intimately mixed with saliva and digested, and so becomes nutritious and fattening. Still more, if the food is stenmed, or wet with scalding water, it carries on the process farther and better. Now, add a little meal, and the fodder is more nutritious and every way better, If the foregoing be true of hay, it is more so of straw and corn-stalks, because they contain more cellulose matter, or wood fiber, and less starch and nitrogen. Experiments show that some four-tenths of this woody fiber may be assimilated, and so converted into fat. But to secure this result, it must previously be made fine by artificial processes. Alderman Mechi is reported to have said that 100 pounds of straw cut and steamed is more nourishing than the same weight of Timothy hay not chopped. We suspect his experiments were made with overripe hay, and straw harvested "in the milk," Either his hay was not as good as our Yankee hay, or his hay was better.

WINDMILLS,-In reply to several inquiries for windmill powers, we will state that such are now employed all over the country, for pumping water, churning, driving saws for cutting fire wood, and they may be made to run thrashing machines, or grain mills.—
Such a mill can be erected over or near the barn to drive reversel kinds of man a barn to drive several kinds of ma chinery and any skillful mechanic can put one up. If the wings are not seli-regulating, a brake, can be applied to some journal to stop them, or to make them run slowly during a gale.

MAKING A SOLID MASS OF ICE Where a supply of water can be had, with a little fall, and where there is sufficient cold weather, an ice housecan be readily filled with a solid mass of ica at trifling expense. Arrange a pipe so that the water can be thrown out over fine sprey, as from the rose of a watering pot. This will freeze as it fulls, quite rapidly in cold weather, and in a brief time a whole hance can be in the floor of the ice house in the form of ief time a whole house can be thus filled with a solid mass,
