MANNERS OF AMERICAN LADIES.

The following is a pretty good story of life at a watering place, and will be found amusing. The allusion to the fig leaf is life at a watering place, and will be found amusing. The allusion to the tig leaf is eloquently significant:

American ladies shrink from appearing in full dress, however moderate its so-called fullness, in a stall or in the open box of a theatre, or at the dinner-table of a hotel, which is open to the public, and where they may be in close proximity to entire strangers of whom they know only that they can afford to pay for their sents or their dinners. The distinction made in this respect is very marked at the opera, or their dinners. The distinction made in this respect is very marked at the opera, to which ladies go in full dress, and from the opera to parties. But they never go in full dress unless they have a private box. In the stalls, the parquet, on the first tier of 'boxes, where single seats are sold, they appear in elegant demittoilette, often wearing bonnets of incomprehensible structure and wonderful to behold.—And this is not a matter of "set" or feel-And this is not a matter of "set" or fashion. The same woman will be at the opera on one evening in full dress in a private box, and at the next performance in the stalls or the parquet, with arms, shoulders and head uncovered. A lady had rather an unpleasant experience in an attempt some years ago to disregard this tacit understanding among the sex in regard to dinner dress at hotels. She belonged to an ultra fashionable set, and having married a South Carolina planter, soon adopted what we call "plantation manners," and affected no little scorn of simple-mannered, reserved New England folk. She was at Newport, our great seaside watering place, and, having just re-turned from Europe, took greatairs upon herself. One evening at a tea-table a gen-tleman sat down near her, and the butterplate before him happening to have no butter-knife by it at the moment, he, instead of calling the waiter and waiting for one to be brought, used his own per-fectly fresh bright knife to take a bit of butter. He was a man of culture and so-cial standing, but a Yankee, and one whose social pretension she wished to flout. She seized the opportunity, and, calling a waiter, said, in an elaborately subdued, but decided tone:

'Take away that butter. That gentleman has had his knife in it. He took no notice of the remark, which drew all eyes upon him and upon the lady; but by and bye she stretched out her hand took from the plate some chipped dried beef which stood between her and how within [18]. her victim. This was well enough, of course,; but he turned at once, and, call-ing a waiter, said, only as if he were asking for more ten:

"Take away that dried beef, this lady has had her fingers in it."

In this encounter, such as it was, he was thought to have had the best of it, and she did not forgive or forget. So, a few days afterward, they being at dinner, she, conspicuous in the full dress she had adopted since her tour to Europe, and which was so very "full" that it would have attracted attention under any circumstances, took one from a dish of fresh figs before her, and, putting it on a plate, handed it to him with an expression of complaisance, but saying in a tone of un-mistakable significance, which could be heard all around her:

"A fig for you, sir."

He accepted it graciously, and, taking in his turn a leaf from the garniture of the dish, offered it to her with—

"A fig-lenf for you, madam."
She fled the table, and kept her room until her intended victim left the hotel.

STRANGE CUSTOMS.

The following is a curious account of the habits and customs of some of the tribes in the interior of Africa, as we find it in the new volume of travels by David and Charles Livingstone, just issued in London. Speaking of the women in Morambala, the narrative says:
"These damsels looked with consider-ble disgust on the 'men in bags,' as the trowsered whites were called. Even the dren by threatening to fetch the white man to bite them. In their eyes, Dr. Livingstone, busy with the wet and dry bulb thermometors, was an object of pity. playing with toys, like a little boy; but when they beheld the travelers spreading butter, 'raw butter,' on their bread, their only use butter, after melting it, to anoint their heads and bodies.

"The most wonderful of ornaments, if such it may be called, is the pelele, or upper-lip ring of the women. The middle of the upper-lip of the girl is pierced close to the septum of the nose, and a small pin inserted to prevent the puncture closing up. After it has healed, the pin is taken out and a larger one is pressed into its out and a larger one is pressed into its place, and so on successfully for weeks, and months, and years. The process o increasing the size of the lip goes on till its capacity becomes so great that a ring of two inches in diameter can be intro duced with ease. All the highland women wear the pelele, and it is common on the upper and lower shire. The poorer classes make them of hollow or of solid bamboo, but the wealthier of ivory or tin. The tin pelele is often made in the form of a small dish. The ivory one is not unlike a napkin-ring. No woman ever appears in public without the pelele, except in times of mourning for the dead. It is frightfully ugly to see the upper lip projecting two inches beyond the tip of the nose. When an old wearer of a hollow bamboo ring smiles, by the action of the muscles of the checks the ring and lip outside of it are dragged back and thrown above the eyebrows. The nose is seen through the middle of the ring, and the exposed teeth show how carefully they have been chipped to look like those of a cat or crocodile. The pelele of an old lacat or crocodile. The pelele of an old lady, Chickanda Kadze, a chieftainess, about twenty miles north of Morambala, hung down below her chin, with, of course, a piece of the upper lip around its border. The labial letters cannot be properly pronounced, but the under lip has to do its best for them against the upper teeth and gum. Tell them it makes them ugly; they had better throw it away; they reply, 'Kodi! Really! it is the fashion!' How this hideous fashion originated is an enigma. Can thick line originated is an enigma. Can thick lips ever have been thought beautiful, and this mode of artificial enlargement resorted to in consequence? The constant twiddling of the pelele with the tongue by the younger women suggested the irreverent idea that it might have been inreverent idea that it might have been invented to give safe employment to that little member. 'Why do the women wear these things?' we inquired of the old chief Chinsunse. Evidently surprised at such a stupid question, he replied, 'For beauty to be sure! Men have beards and whisters; women have none; and what kind of eventure would a very and what kind of creature would a wo-man be without whiskers and without a pelele? She would have a mouth like a man, and no beard; ha! ha! After-wards, on the Rovuma, we found men wearing the pelele as well as women."

AN HOUR WITH A MUSICIAN.

The Parisian correspondent of the Boston Gaztte, relates the following amusing story of a well-known nusical composer and the supposed King of Portugal, jus-at the time when the King of Portugal was in Paris and had been visiting a celet brated composer. brated composer:

A young man with an olive complexion called a few days since upon one of our musical composers, who has that mirage of reputation which surrounds men constantly before the public and which the property of the public and which the public and stantly before the public, and which they take for fame. This composer has never, I believe, ventured on an opera; but his songs are popular and enable him, without too many secret struggles, to maintain a decent appearance in the world.

The young man took his seat with a good deal of freedom, and his whole appearance was quite aristocratic. But who that is able to buy a broadcloth suit and a watch and other input entitle aristocratic. and chain isn't aristocratic now-a-days?

The young man said to the composer:
"Sir, I have heard some charming compositions from your pen. There is one of your waltzes especially which I know by heart and which I cannot hear too often." The composer was agitated, so great was the emotion which rose in his breast, and he replied: "Sir, you do me a great deal of honor, and, as you give me perteat of nonor, and, as you give the permission, I will play some of my compositions for you."

The young man bowed and said: "I should be gratified to hear you."

The composer sat down at the piano and for an hour played all of his compositions while the distinguished young man heat fime in a manner whele showed how beat time in a manner which showed how thorough was his musical education. At last, and when the composer was about to begin his twentieth composition, the young man rose and showed he wished to edge a word in between all those notes. The composer and his piano were silent while the young man said:

while the young man said:
"Sir, your talents are really extraordinary, and but one thing surprises me—I am astonished that an artist of your capacity has no decoration."
The composer could scarcely gasp: "Is it possible? Do you take so much interest in me."

The visitor continued: "Indeed I do, and not I only, but my whole family take the liveliest interest in you, and if any of us knew by what way we could farther your interests, I assure you we would instantly exert ourselves."

The composer—who felt certain the King of Portugal stood before him, and was sure that he would have at least two orders in his button-hole—gasped: "Really, really, sir, you are too kind, and if I knew, by what way I could give proof of my gratitude, I would immediately demonstrate it."

The aristocratic visitor replied: "It is very easy for you to do so. If you would only pay father the bill you have been owing him these twelve months. I am the son of the upholsterer to whom you have been owing $140 ever since last De cember. So you can easily understand the deep interest we take in your affairs and in your success."

The composer nearly fell to the floor, so crushed was he by the discovery of a creditor's son, and that creditor an upholsterer, under the frock coat which he of the article property of the trivial of Particle 1981. felt certain covered the King of Portugal's heart. When he recovered something of his self-posession, his first impulse was to throw the young man out of the window but then he remembered the policeman at the corner of the street. Therefore he contented himself with bowing the "King of Portugal" out of the room without saying a word—hadn't he given him an hour of his best music." of his best music?

MR. H. T. HELMBOLD:

Dear Sir.—In regard to the question asked me as to my opinion about Buchu, I would say that I have used and sold the article in various forms for the past thirty years. I do not think there is any form or preparation of it I have not used or known to be used, in the various diseases where such medicate agent would be indicated. You are aware as well as myself, that it has been extensively employed in the various diseases of the bladder and kidneys, and the reputation it has accquired in my judgment is warranted by the facts.

I have seen and used; as before stated, every form of Buchu—the powdered leaves, the simple decoction, tincture, fluid extracts,—and I am not cognizant of any preparation of that plant at all equal to yours. Twelve years' experience ought, I think, to give me the right to judge of its merits, and without prejudice or partiality, I give yours precedence over all others. I do not value a thing according to its bulk, if I did other Buchus would out do yours, but I hold to the doctrine that bulk and quantity do not make up value—if they did a copper cent would be worth more than a gold dollar.

I value your Buchu for its effect on patients. I value your Buchu for its effect on patients I have cured with it, and seen cured with it more diseases of the bladder and kidneys than I have ever seen cured with my other Buchu, or any other proprietory compound of whatever name.

Respectfully, yours &c., G. H. KEYSER, M. D. 140 WOOD STREET, PITTSBURGH PA.
