POINTS OF A GOOD HOG. I could caution the reader against being led away by a mere name, in his selection of a hog. A hog may be called a Berkshire or a Suffolk, or any other breed most in estimation, and yet may in reality possess none of this valuable blood.—
The only sure mode by which the buyer will be able to avoid impositions is, to make name always secondary to points. If you find a hog hog possessed of such points of form as are calculated to insure carly motivity, and facility of taking early maturity, and facility of taking flesh, you need care little what it has seemed good to the seller to call him ; an remember that no name can bestow val-ue upon an animal deficient in the quali-ties to which I have alluded. The truc ties fo which I have alluded. The true Berkshire—that possesses a dash of the Chinese and Neapolitan varieties—comes, perhaps, nearer to the desired standard than any other. The chief points which characterize such a hog are the following: In the first place, sufficient depth of carcass, and such an elongation of body as will insure a sufficient lateral expansion. Let the loin and chest be broad. The breadth of the former denotes good room for the play of the lungs, and consequent for the play of the lungs, and consequent free and healthy circulation, essential to the thriving or fattening of any animal The bone should be small and the joint fine—nothing is more indicative of high breeding than this; and the legs should be no longer than, when fully fat, would just prevent the animal's belly from trailing upon the ground. The leg is the least profitable portion of the hog, and we require no more of it than is absolutely necessary for the rest. See that the feet be firm and sound; that the toes lie well together and press straightly uplie well together, and press straightly upon the ground; as also, that the claws are even, upright, and healthy. Many say that the form of the head is of little or no consequence, and that, a good hog may have an ugly head; but I regard the head of all animals as one of the very princi-pal points in which pure or impure breed-ing will be the most obviously indicated. highbred animal will invariably found to arrive more speedily to maturity, to take flesh earlier, and with greater facility, and, altogether, to turn out more profitably, than one of questionable or impure stock; and such being the case, I impure stock; and such being the case, 1 consider that the head of the hog is, by no means, a point to be overlooked by the purchaser. The description of head most likely to promise, or rather to be concommitant of high breeding, is one not carrying heavy bone, not too flat on the forehead, or possessing a too elongated snout—the snout should be short, and the forehead rather convex curving unward. forehead rather convex, curving upward; and the ear should be, while pendulous, inclining somewhat forward, and at the same time, light and thin. Nor should be hear the same time, light and then be the same time. the buyer pass over even the carriage of a pig. If this be dull, heavy, and dejected, reject him, on suspicion of ill health, if not of some concealed disorder actually existing, or just about to break forth; and there cannot be a more unfavorable symp tom than a hang-down, slouching head Of course, a fat hog for slaughter, or sow heavy with young, has not much sprightliness of deportment.

Nor is color altogether to be lost sight of. In the case of hogs I would prefer those colors which are characteristic of our most esteemed breeds. If the hair be seant, I would look for black, as denoting connection with the Neapolitan; but if too bare of hair, I would be disposed to apprehend too immediate alliance with that variety, and a consequent want of hardihood, that, however unimportant, if pork be the object, renders such animals hazardous speculations as stores, from their outrop consential in the solutions. from their extreme susceptibility to cold, and consequent liability to disease. If white, and not too small, I would like them as exhibiting connection with the Chinese. If light or sandy, or red with black marks, I would recognise our favorite Berkshire; and so on, with reference to every possible variety of hue. These observations may appear trivial but they are the most important I have yet mude, and the pig buyer will find his accountin attending to them.—Rural Hand Book.

The Weeds--How to Dispose of Them.

Weeds are the gardener's enemies and very persistent enemies they are maintaining a constant campaign against his success. The thorough gardener un-derstands this perfectly well, and is no less hostile to these ceaseless intruders than they are to him. On his premises they are not allowed to flourish; one of them are not allowed to nourish; one of them scarcely appears above the soil before it is rooted up and destroyed. But, unfortunatey, there are some who are not so vigilant. The noxious weeds flourish, and deprive the useful vegetables of the best part of the nourishment which they would otherwise obtain. And in such cases, as autumn approaches, instead of clean beds of vegetables that delight the eyes of the housewife, we see a perfect jungle of grass, dock weeds and other pests, an unendurable plague to the prudent husbandman.

Now, good reader, if this be the unhappy plight of your own garden, it is time to change your tactics; and though it be late in the season you can begin now. You need not wait until another spring before you begin the work of improvement. To be sure, you cannot preventhe growth of pests, that may have already taken place, but you may prevent their ripening seed for another crop; and, moreover, you may turn this growth to some account in improving your land. This is the way to dispose of them: Clean out your garden, removing as far as possible every weed, root and branch, but, do not leave them scattered all over the surface of the ground. If you do, they will be very apt to take root and grow. Besides, if left exposed directly under the sun, their fertilizing values will be wasted, sun, their fertilizing values will be wasted, for the greatest part of their substance will decompose and escape by evaporation. The best way is to gather them into heaps, and cover with a little dirt, and leave them to decay. This will leave the ground clean, and it will remain so much longer than it otherwise would, and they will assist to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to improve the soil which their growth has belief to the soil which their growth the soil which t growth has helped to impoverish.

The Butter Maker's Golden Rules.

The great secret in butter making it seems consists in attending to the follow seems consists in attending to the following points:

"1st. Securing rich, clean, healthy milk—milk obtained on rich old pastures, free of weeds.

2d. Setting the milk in a moist, untainted atmosphere and keeping it at an even temperature, while the cream is rising,

3d Proper management in churning. 4th Washing out the buttermilk thoroughly and working so as not to injure

5th. Thorough and even incorporation of the salt, and packing in oaken tubs, light, clean, and well made.

6th. Cleanliness in all the operations is of imperative necessity.
7th. Judgmentand experience in manipulating the cream, and working the butter must of course be had.— Willard. REMEDY FOR FLEAS INFESTING CATSOR

Dogs.—Many of our domestic animals in some sections of this country are sorely pestered with fleas; the best remedy as a "ticket of leave" for such torments, is a few drops of the oil of pennyroyal, to be rubbed over the region of the spine.—Shold the fleas be very numerous infusion of the herb may be prepared, with which the animal should be bathed occasionally. -Dr. Dadd.

CLARK CHATTEN, an Illinois farmer, states that one gallon of coal oil to a barrel of water sprinkled lightly over potato vines will effectually destroy the bug.

Some of the Alabama papers say that the wheat crop in that State will be an average, though the cotton crop is much
