D's" experience is as follows:—
"I have thought that some of my 'dearly bought' experience, if communicated through your columns, would be instructive to many of your readers. In 1847 I took up my residence in a small county town in that portion of Southern Illinois, named 'Egypt' (probably by unsuccesstown in that portion of Southern Illinois, named 'Egypt,' (probably by unsuccessful speculators—perhaps from its great fertility and mild climate, but more likely from the supposed ignorance and mental darkness of its population.) We were seventy-five miles from St. Louis, the roads to which city, although excellent in summer, were during the open, constantly freezing-and-thawing winters almost annually impassable to wagons. I kept a country store, and one day in January, a customer drove up to my door, with about one hundred turkles. A sudden thaw, accompanied by rain, had set with about one hundred turkies. A sudden thaw, accompanied by rain, had set in, and any further traveling was impossible. He wanted me to take the whole load for 31 cents each, and I finally reluctantly yielded. The turkies were turned into a good-sized lot, in which was a house for shelter, and abundance of grandle and water and corn costing one was a house for shelter, and abundance of gravel, sand, water, and corn, costing only 15 cents a bushel, to feed them.

One would suppose this to be a very paradise for turkies, but it was soon found to be their grave-yard. Notwithstanding our care and abundant food, they drooped, sickened, and commenced dying.—We changed their food, gave them oats, corn meal, fresh meat, procured fresh gravel, but all to no purpose, the sickness and mortality increased and continued.—It was clear that they had contracted some disease while cooped on the wagon. to was clear that they had contracted some disease while cooped on the wagon, and that four or five weeks freedom, and abundant and pure food appeared to only aggravate it. What was to be done?—Everything had been tried within our knowledge. Old ladies, familiar with 'Turkey,' were solemnly consulted, but their nostrums and only inons were as usetheir nostrums and opinions were as use less and valueless as our own experiments, when, accidentally, the remedy presented itself. There was a smoke-house in the yard in which the turkies were fined; the fire, made in a pit extending the length of the house, was exunguished with water every night. A considera-ble quantity of charcoal was there made, which was cleaned out every morning.— The first thrown out into the yard brought the turkles; they eat every piece of it and continued to eat it daily for three weeks—the time consumed in smoking. Then an English poultry butcher, who was on the 'tramp,' butchered and dressed them, placing the livers under one wing, and the gizzards under the other, ran two handsome skewers through each of them, and decorated them with ornamental white and colored paper. They were pronounced the finest lot of turkies ever seen in St. Louis' market."—Ameri-

There appears to be a good promise for apples and pears, but a general failure of peaches. We can not hear of any Eastern peach region where there is likely to be even a moderate crop. What shall we do for peaches? The peach region has been pushed pown into Delaware and Mar-yland; must we look to Virginia and the Carolinas for our supply? It is not only the porer, the curl, and the yellows, but the rigor of winters, and uncertanty of our springs baffle the cultivator. We have given saveral plans that have been pro-posed for protecting trees during their season of rest. Whoever hits upon a system of protection, easily applicable on a large scale, will find his account in it. large scale, will find his account in it.

Marketing of early apples and pears will require care. Regular market growers know that a little time expended in preparing fruit for market will be repaid. It generally pays to make two qualities, to which may be added a third, fit only for the pigs. Establish a reputation for fair dealing, by having the baskets or barrels run of even quality throughout. Pick the fruit before it softens, but not before it is fully developed. Allow no beating or other rough usage of trees in order to get the fruit off. A self supporting fruit ladder is very usefull, or a common ladder may be stayed by guy ropes.

Insects will still demand the attention. Fruit that has fallen because it contains

Gas Tar for Posts,

A correspondent says: "The complaint is sometimes made that gas tar does not prevent rot in posts. Whenever it fails to do this, it is probably because the posts were green when it was applied. Of course, when they afterward became season-cracked, the moisture entered the cracks and decay went on rapidly. The only way is to use seasoned posts. The tar is generally applied with a course brush. Experience is now showing that the best of all ways is to heat the tar in a deep vessel, and when it is boilling, set the best of all ways is to heat the tar in a deep vessel, and when it is boilling, set in the lower ends of a few posts at a time, keeping them in about half an hour, so that the tar will fairly boil into the pores of the post. This requires time and patience, but it is worth the while, because posts so treated will last half a century. The gas tar coating should extend up a few inches higher than the surface of the ground." It is settled also that if the freshly tarred posts be covered with sand
