Agricultural.

[From the American Agriculturist. NOTES ON STRAWBERRIES. A hard winter, and a cold spring with late frosts and cold cutting winds, have made the strawberry crop as a whole a failure. Here and there a field has yielded well, but these are exceptions. We attended the recent Pittsburg meet we attended the recent I usual market were gentlemen present from New Jersey, New-York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, all of whom told the same story, and variously estimated the present year's crop, at \(\frac{1}{2}\) to \(\frac{1}{2}\) the usu-al amount. In the extensive grounds of Mr. Knox, the crop will not exceed

1 of that of former years. Withregard to varieties, we are no nearer any definite result than before and it is not possible to say, what one, or what dozen varieties are best for all soils and localities. The difficulty in making up select lists of fruits which shall answer for a wide range of country, becomes manifest when we bring together the experiences of cultivators in widely separated localities, not only in our own country, but abroad. An instance of this is found in the list of 25 strawberries, recommended last year by the Imperial Horticultural Society of France. Ever since the appearance of the list, the journals of that country have been full of criticisms, so severe that one is almost induced to believe that the Society had proposed the twenty-five worst instead of the twenty-five best va-

Wilson's Albany is the variety more Wilson's Albany is the variety more generally cultivated than any, perhaps than others; yet, in some places, it is perfectly worthless and quite given up. The "Agriculturist," in Southern New Jersey; is likely to be the leading variety. Indeed, the only really good crop of strawberries we have seen in quite extended tours, was of this variety, in the grounds of Mr. William Parry, of Cinnaminson. Its yield there is some Cinnaminson. Its yield there is something so remarkable, that he and his neighbors speak of it in terms of the greatest enthusiasm, and will plant very greatest enthusiasm, and will plant very largely of it; and we have similar reports from some other localities. Yet this same variety, in the grounds of Mr. Knox, near Pittsburgh, has a very poor show of fruit. These facts demonstrate the value of local experience. The strawberry is so easily multiplied, comes in fruit co some and the variety were in fruit so soon, and the varieties are so numerous, that it is an easy matter for each large grower, or for each local society, to soon find out, by actual test, what kinds are best suited to their conditions of soil, etc.

In the methods of cultivation, we also find diversities of opinion. In some parts of Illinois, the plants are set and allowed to cover the ground; they get very little attention, and when they cease to yield, they are plowed under. In Southern New Jersey the plants are allowed to cover beds three and a half or four feet wide, with two feet alleys. or four feet wide, with two feet alleys between—the bed receiving in early winter a dressing of fine stable manure, but no mulching of straw. These beds bear one and two years. In hill, or stool culture, as extensively practised by Mr. Knox, the plants are set 18 inches apart, in rows 18 inches from each other. In autumn the ground is well mulched with straw, and the plants lightly covered. In spring the straw is opened directly over the plant, but is not removed. As the runners appear, they are pinched off; or, if allowed to get too strong for pinching, they are cut with a knife. The weeds that appear near the plants are pulled by hand, and those that come up through the straw between the rows are removed by the back. that come up through the straw between the rows, are removed by the hoe.—But few weeds make their way up through a heavy mulch, and these are destroyed very easily. The hills keep on bearing three or four years, and the mulch is kept on all the time, replacing each year the annual waste from decay, which amounts to a fourth or a third of the original quantity. That this earethe original quantity. That this careful culture with many varieties, especially those of European origin, will give better results than allowing the plants to run, there is no donbt; but, that it is the best for all kinds, we are by no means cortain. We have nowhereseen the Agreement of the cortain. certain. We have nowhereseen the Agriculturist producing as well when kept in stools, as where it is allowed to cover the ground with its vines, and, we may say, with its fruit.

Urine as a Liquid Manure.

A writer in the Gardener's Chronicle, (Eng.,) finds urine a most valuable fertilizer, when used in the following manner:

"Human urine, free from other slops, which in a is allowed to get quite stale, which in a moderate temperature it will do in about a week. In this condition it is strongly alkaline, and will turn red litmus paper blue. To the urine in this condition, sulphuric acid (oil of vitrio) is gradually added until it is slightly acid, which is known by its turning the blue litmus paper red again. The immunit of acid required, is about two ounces to each gallon of urine. To neutralize any axcess of acid, add about 2 onnees of ground chalk to the gallon.
Of the liquid thus prepared, one pint, after stirring it thoroughly to diffuse the settlings, is diluted with one or two gallons of water the gallons of water, the latter proportion being strong enough for most plants, and applied at once. This manure has been found very serviceable on grass plots in England, and be applied wherever guano or other ammoniaci manure would be admissable. The litrum per property of the control of the would be admissable. The litmus paper is paper colored with an infusion of litmus. It is blue or red, according as it has been subjected to the action of an acid or an alkali. The paper, or the litmus itself, may be had of any good druggist.

STOPPING THE BLEEDING OF VINES.

Though too late for use this year, we give two methods recently proposed. A correspondent, "C.," writes, that having to move an old vine, he cut it back and covered the wounds with copal varnish with success, and that he has since used the varnish when obliged to prune in spring, and finds it stops the bleeding. A writer in the London Journal of Horticulture, wipes the end of the vine dry, and covers it with a stiff paste of cement (hydraulic lime). The application is repeated two or three bours often the first one and the bleed hours after the first one, and the bleeding is stopped.

Whoever sends fruit to a distant market, is obliged to pack it in barrels, baskets, or crates. It would pay those who dispose of the products of their orchards near home to take more pains than is usual. In our large towns and villages it is a common thing to see the body of a wagon without springs, filled with apples pears and peaches, to be peddled out with no more care than potatoes. If those who dispose of only a moderate amount each year will place their fruit in bushel baskets or crates, and put in only good fruit, they will get in increased price that will in a short time more than pay for the packages. Fruit is too great a blessing to be treated in the careless way we often see. Fruit should be picked, especially if to go to a distance, while yet firm, but still fully developed. The old peach basket is now replaced by slotted crates. still fully developed. The old peach basket is now replaced by slatted crates. with two compartments of one-half
