Christmas without its evergreens, would lose half its holiday charms. The custom of decorating churches and private dwellings is a pleasant one, and, in cities at least, well nigh universal. Most children know, and those of us who are no longer children recollect, the pleasures of anticipation, as well as the realized en-joyment of which the Christmas tree is the center. We might say much of the genial influences of the Christmas treefor no other free bears fruit so fragrant with the best affections of our natures— but we set out to write upon its business aspects. Unsentimental as it may seem, aspects. Unsentimental as it may seem all this holiday decoration results in put ting money into some one's pocket. We never fail to make several visits to the markets in the week that precedes Christmas. The sight is one which would astonish a stranger. Not only do the woods and swamps of New Jersey repeat the wonder of "Burman's Wood" coming to "Dunsinane," but our nurserymen send in their over-grown evergreen stock by the load, and turn all the streets near the markets into green avenues, where the city odors are for the time replaced by the balsamic scent of the fir and cedar. The traffic in these green commodities is very large, but so irregular and divided up that it is difficult to get any statistics. The articles bring good prices, for in holiday times the purse is as open as the heart, and the results of the purse is a point of the purse. and the venders know it, and profit by their knowledge. Our artist has given a sketch from the evergreen market, and surrounded it by leaves of some of the principal kinds used for decoration. Spruces and Firs, are always in demand for Christmas trees, and bring better prices than they would as living trees for planting. Holly, especially with berries, Laurel, Inkberry and Hemlock, are all sold in great quantities. The smaller ever-greens are made up into wreaths or "ro-ping," as the dealers call it, of various lengths; there are usually of one of two or three species of Clubmoss and sell at about five cents a yard. Another class of decorations is made with a frame work of lath or twigs, and covered with some kind of green. These are formed into crosses, of green. These are formed into crosses, stars, and other devices. Some of the wreaths, etc., are prettily decorated with bright berries, while others, to meet a cruder taste, are made gaudy with flowers cut from brightly colored paper. The huge piles gathered around the markets are soon scattered; every express wagon takes a share, men and women ride in omnibusses and cars with their hands filled with them, and the poor woman who takes home her own market basket, bears a bit of holly or other green with it. These evergreens now cease to be articles of traffic, as soon as they are taken to the house of rich or poor they become consecrated by entering the sanctuary of home, and contribute to the enjoyment of that holiday that celebrates the announcement:—
"Peace on earth; good will toward man."

The Slaughter of Animals for Food

There are certain facts concerning the killing of the animals which form so large a portion of our food, that should be known by every meat buyer, if not meat eater, because they effect the condition of the meat, its healthfulness and keeping qualities. Our own attention has been particularly directed to the subject by the opening of an immense slaughter-house near the City of New York, by capitalists and butchers of Chicago. The new Abattoir is in fact a regular Chicago slaughterhouse for all kinds of animals, on a larger scale than anything existing there.

The old fashioned way of killing beeves, was to knock them in the head with a pole-ax, then cut their throats, and while pole-ax, then cut their throats, and while bleeding commence skinning and sling-ing them up by the hind legs. Our butch-ers were slow to learn of the Jews, who practiced throwing and slinging the animal and then cutting its throat, and in this way scouring the most perfect possi-ble bleeding, and following the Mosaic command, "the blood thereof, which is the life thereof, shalt thou not eat." Our butchers are now following a very similar practice, modifying it by hitting the beasts a mereiful rap now and then on the head to destroy consciousness. In this way the beef bleeds better, as all the blood of the hind quarters at least tends to the

There is a serious objection to knocking beeves in the head. The shock to the nervous system is such as to cause tremor and great rigidity in the muscles, although it is the part of humanity to put the poor te is the part of humanity to put the poor beasts as soon as possible in a condition of unconsciousness. But this is a serious hinderance to free bleeding. European butchers have long practiced what is termed "prickling down," and this has also been to some extent done, or rather tried in this country. It consists in driving a narrow knife blade by an instantaneous motion in between the head and the first vertebra, piercing the spinal marrow. worton in between the head and the first vertebra, piercing the spinal marrow.—
This destroys all sense, and paralizes all the muscles of the body, leaving them soft and flexible. When an animal is in this condition, it must be slung up by the hind legs and bled at once, when the blood will flow quite as freely, as if the animal were conscious. This method therefore combines the excellence of the Hebrew way, and the humanity of the therefore combines the excellence of the Hebrew way, and the humanity of the old knocking down process.

When an animal is killed during, or soon after a fright or great heat and exhaustion, it rarely bleeds well, but the meat is left bloody and feverish, it soon spoils, and is besides unhealthy. Whether the paroxysm of fear, which coours when the animal is suddenly in full consciousness slung up by one or both hind. sciousness slung up by one or both hind legs, and which lasts until it dies, has any bad effect on the meat, physicians must determine. The superiority of the pricking down process is so evident, that we think it ought always to be followed.
It was not practiced at the new Abattoir—though the killing there was done very expeditiously and the beef looked exceedingly well.

A Hint on Improving an Old Place.

Once or twice a year we make a visit to of the of who came into possision of an old farm, and who has already made great progress in improving and beautifying it. Like many places of this kind, it was enclosed in a solid, but not very sightly stone wall. The matter of a boundary fence was considered by him in all points of view. considered by him in all points of view, and he finally fixed upon and carried out successfully the following: The old wall successfully the following: The old wall was allowed to remain, and close to it, upon the outside, a hedge of Norway spruce was planted. The trees, from a nursery close at hand, were set a year ago, in August. All weeds have been kept closely mowed, the grass has taken a foothold, and the result is, that from the road-way momen there is a helt of grass for the heldge proper, there is a belt of grass to the hedge, and this has, although set in August, lost scarcely a tree, and has become so dense as to already nearly conceal the wall from view. The whole presents an aspect of finish and elegance, in marked contrast with the slovenly appearance of the opposite side of the road. The spruce hedge is protected from injury by cattle and other causes, by means of a few lengths of galvanized wire stretched to temporary posts. Another year will probably show the complete success of this treatment of a boundary wall.

WHY THE BEST FLOUR IS CHEAPEST .-Two dollars extra on the price of a barrel of flour, will secure a much superior qual-ity. Any one who will devote a little ob-Ry. Any one who will devote a little observation to the subject, will notice that with poor bread, people eat from \(\frac{1}{2}\) to \(\frac{1}{2}\) more butter than they do with that which is of superior or extra quality. If we reckon \(\frac{1}{2}\) more, it will be seen by the calculations of the preceding item, that \(\frac{1}{2}\) is saved in the price of flour involves \(\frac{1}{2}\). So more expenses for butter and for extractions. es for butter, or for other condiments to make the poorer bread palatable.
