THE POETRY OF FARMING.—A writer in the columns of the Rarat World says that agriculture has a field of poetry as well as of practical culture. The "pas-toral landscape" is here—all that the din-cients have said about it, the harvest field sung about and beloved by everybody; the "tanned haycock;" the seent of new made hay at evening; the fields with their garniture of green, embracing the whole practical world of nature, the great would color the poet's inspiration. There are fruits, ripe, golden apples, blushing and fragrant; peaches, yelvet, watery peaches; pears, plums, the strawbery, and the seedy, glistening blackberry, with their fields of poetry! and the maize—in the fields of poetry! and the maize-in the fields of poetry! and the coning like a wine press with plenty and good cheer. What hope! what prospect in store for the bright winter evenings! The vineyard itself isone of the greatest poems. How the ancients doted upon it, and sang like praise, and now it is flowing in streams and hanging its purple clusters in burst-ing profusion.

DAHLIAS—TAKING UP AND STORING. —After the fall frosts have destreyed the vitality of the plants, choose some dry morning with the probability of a fine day, and cut the stalks within a foot of the ground. The following day take up the roots, and turn them upwards, to al-low the water to drain from the stems.— Put them under cover, and see that the number and names are securely attached to the stems with wire. When dry, sep-arate the tubers from the earth and store them away in a dry cellar. Pack them stems downward, and cover them with a hyer of dry, clean straw, several inches thick, a layer of roots and a layer of plant-ing. They should however, be attended to, in order to ascertain whether they keep well, removing such as show marks of decay, if any.

HORSES, MULES AND OXEN.—Those having work to do should have especial care. It is not enough that they are well supplied with food. Ample stable room, clean bedding, and a free use of curry comb and brush, and rubbing dry, and cleaning their feet and legs, always after the day's work. Working oxen must have a feedling apartment to themselves. They would be more valuable workers if more care were bestowed upon them. It is true that they may consume always courser food than horses, but something of the same care that horses get, especial-ly in the busy, working season, would make them little less valuable for the plough than they now are for slow, heavy draught.

TAPIOCA PUDDING.—Three tablespoon-fuls of taploca sonked over night, 1 quart of milk, the yolks of 3 eggs; boil all to-gether in a farina kettle, or in a tin pail set into a kettle of cold water and boiled; add sugarto your taste. When thorough-ly cooked, take the whites of the 3 eggs and beat to a stiff froth, and pour over the whole while hot.
