BUTTER MAKING IN WINTER.

Some families are quite successful in making butter in the winter season. Mr. Scott, of Vermont, believes that it may be made about as profitable when the cows are fed with the right kind of hay as when they run in pasture. But there are so many who "don't have no luck in winter," that milk enough to make many tons of butter is wasted every winter. A correspondent of the Rural American, whose wife has made butter every winter for ten years, and who has himself done all the churning in a common dash churn, seldom occupying more than ten or fifteen minutes in the operation, condenses the secret of his success, so far as the management of the milk and cream is concerned, into the following pithy sentences:

Cows should be kept warm and clean, and in addition to plenty of sweet, early cut hay, milk cows should be treated with warm slops and bran mashes, varied by roots and meal. They should have plenty of pure air and exercise, and be salted regularly once a week. The stables and cows must be well cleaned before milking, and the treatment of the cows be ruled by patience and gentleness. The milk, when strained, should be brought to a scalding heat and set in a warm place, where it will not freeze. The cream should be taken off before the milk thickens, and be kept in as cool a place as it can be without freezing. Cream managed in this way will be very thick, and when put in the churn needs diluting, which should be done by adding warm milk till, when well mixed, the temperature of the cream is such that a drop applied to the forehead will feel neither cold nor warm.

A Suggestion for Corn Growers.

If the farmer would be content to deal with his other fruit, to take the trouble of a double in-gathering, to crop ears of corn as he would basket cherries or bin hops, and then to mow his straw as he mows his hay, he would incur a first expense perhaps double his present. If when the corn arrived at the proper stage of maturity, irrespective of barometer or weathercock he were to turn all avaliable hands, women and children more profitably than men, on his well-eared fields, each provided with a basket such as that in which seed corn is carried, slung round the neck, and a small knife, or a triangular piece of iron, worn like a tailor's thimble on the forefinger, the whole of the corn would be rapidly secured, being plucked or rather bent over the knife immediately beneath the ear, dropped at once into the basket, and never suffered to touch the ground, or knocked about to the loss of a single grain, before it was safely deposited in the granery; then wet, it could be safely and inexpensively subjected to a simple process of drying, a process which, if once adopted, would be likely to become universal, whether the corn were in-gathered wet or dry, as it would entirely obviate the painful and clumsy process of thrashing.

If the ears of corn were placed in baskets or wire trays, tier above tier, so that a strong and sustained blast of air were driven through them, whether set in motion by a fan or by the draught of a lofty chimney—the great power of which is well known to those who have had to deal with really high stacks—not only would all superfluous moisture be rapidly absorbed, but the ear would become so dry as to cease to retain the grain, which would fall from the basket as from a seive on the slightest motion. The precious part of the crop thus secured, the farmer would take his own time for mowing the straw, or cutting it by machinery; at least he would do so until practice in drying the wheat itself should teach him that it was false economy to lose either straw or hay in unfavorable weather for want of proper arrangements for drying these valuable crops.—The Builder.

CAN'T COOK.—It is a sad defect when young ladies are incapable of directing their own servants; shoes without soles, or wristbands without a shirt, are not more useless than one of these. One day, shortly after his marriage, a young merchant went home and seeing no dinner ready, and his wife appearing anxious and confused, he asked:

"What is the matter?"

"Nancy went off at ten o'clock this morning, replied his wife, and the chambermaid knows no more about cooking a dinner than a man in the moon."

"Couldn't she have done it under your direction?" inquired the husband very coolly.

"Under my direction? I should like to see a dinner cooked under my direction."

"Why so?" asked the husband in surprise.

"You certainly do not think I could," replied the wife, "how sho uld I know anything about cooking?"

The husband was silent, but his look of astonishment perplexed and worried his wife.

"You look very much surprised," she said, after a moment or two had elapsed.

"And so I am," answered he, "as much surprised as I should be to find the captain of one of my ships unacquainted with navigation. You don't know how to cook, and the mistress of a family.—Jane, if there is a cooking school anywhere in the city, go to it and complete your education, for it is deficient in a very important particular."

A GOOD ONE.—During the first year of the war, when change was scarce and some large firms were issuing currency of their own, a farmer went to a store in a neighboring town and bought some goods and gave to the merchant a five dollar bill, of which he wanted seventy-five cents back. The merchant counted out the amount and handed it over to the farmer. He looked at it a moment and inquired, "What's this?" "It's my currency," said the merchant. "Wal, 'taint good for nothing' where I live," said the farmer. "Very well," replied the merchant, "keep it till you get a dollar's worth and bring it to my store and I will give you a dollar bill for it."

The farmer pocketed the change and departed. A few weeks after he went into the same store and bought goods to the amount of one dollar, and after paying over the identical seventy-five cents he took out a handful of pumpkin seeds and counted out twenty-five of them, and passed them over to the merchant.—"Why," says the merchant, "what's this." "Wal," says the farmer; "this is my currency, and when you get a dollar's worth bring it to my place and I will give you a dollar bill for it."

SOOT AND CHARCOAL DUST FOR MANURE.—Soot makes an excellent manure, as it contains a quantity of ammoniacal salts. It is best used in the liquid form, and may thus be applied to flowers and garden plants. Experiments alone will determine how large a quantity must be applied to the plants. Charcoal dust is not only a fertilizer from its inherent qualities but an absorbent of carbonic acid gas from the atmosphere, and thus tends greatly to aid the growth of vegetables. It is therefore, valuable as a kind of manure.

HOW MUCH CORN IN SEVENTY POUNDS OF EARS.—It is customary for Western farmers to sell their corn in the ear, and they give seventy pounds for a bushel. The Prairie Farmer is authority for saying that seventy pounds of old corn on the cob make sixty-five pounds and thirteen ounces. Certainly this will more than pay any farmer for shelling his corn at home. On any prairie farm the cobs alone will pay for shelling, as they are worth nearly as much as coal, pound for pound.

BURNS' COTTAGE FOR SALE.—The necessities of the Ayr Incorporation of Shoemakers compel them to dispose of the most valuable property in their possession—"the auld clay biggin," dear to all Scotsmen, and to every admirer of the greatest lyric genius of this or any other country—if they would maintain, and desire to enhance, the yearly allowance of their aged members. We understand the cottage is now being exposed by private bargain at such a price as it may bring. The honor of becoming proprietor of the building hallowed by so many heart-stirring associations as the natal spot of our great national poet is one that cannot fail to be coveted by many.—Ayrshire (Scotland) Farmer.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND—A Consumptive Cured.—Dr. R. JAMES, a returned Physician of great eminence, discovered, while in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. His child was cured, and is now alive and well. Desirous of benefitting his fellow mortals, he will send to those who wish it the recipe, containing full directions for making and successfully using this remedy, free, on receipt of their names, with two stamps to pay expenses. There is not a single symptom of Consumption that it does not at once take hold of and dissipate. Night sweats, peevishness, irritation of the nerves, failure of memory, difficult expectoration, sharp pains in the lungs, sore throat, chills, nausea, and the Stomach, inaction of the bowels, wasting away of the muscles.
