Agricultural. FEEDING AND FEED FOR PIGS. Mr. S. G. Stearn, a celebrated English breeder of pigs, describes his management of them as follows:

"Pigs eat the food much better when it is fresh. I give them a variety of meal, such as wheat, maize, barley, and whatever is most convenient to mix together. I have it all wetted with cold water, and sprinkle it with boiling water, and sprinkle it with salt. What is mixed one day is used the next, thus giving sufficient time to allow the food slightly to ferment and cool sufficiently to feed with. This is my winter plan, but in the sumferment and cool sufficiently to feed with. This is my winter plan, but in the summer I mix all with cold water, and feed with cold food. Between meals I give them whole maize, and mangold wurzel or swedes cut small, a little coal and soil occasionally, and allow them plenty of clean water. When pigs are put up for fatting, I find nothing better to feed them with than barley and maize meal, mixed together into slops, water always kept by with than barley and maize meal, mixed together into slops, water always kept by them, and a little mangold cut for them occasionally. It is very beneficial to wash and brush them as often as convenient. This is quickly done by experienced hands, and will amply repay for the trouble. I am certain that the cottagers would find their pigs fatten a great deal faster if they would wash and brush them, and feed them with warm food, instead of with food all ice, and that they stead of with food all ice, and that they stead of With food and lee, and shad they would be well paid for any little extra trouble it might cause them. They should also be fed two or three times a day. Goodbred and well-fed store pigs will always consume the refuse which a bad-bred one would be fee?

Soil for a Vineyard.—The Northern Ohio and Lake Shore Grape Growers' As-Contrary to the idea entertained at the commencement of grape culture in this country, it is now the opinion of a majority of vignorens that a dry soil produces the best wine, especially with the Catawba grape. Stiff clay is preferred.—The soil should be dry, hence underdraining is often a necessity. Sandy soils may produce as fair clusters, but the quality of the wine is inferior. Gravelly soil is of the wine is inferior. Gravelly soil is probably the next best. Clay crests that erop out of gravelly or sandy districts are excellent. Manuring is also discarded.— Most experienced growers now conside manure an injury when wine is the object of production. The vine will bear abundantly a long time, and remain healthy on a soil too poor for farming. Manuring may spoil a vineyard. We remember a notable instance of the truth member a notable instance of the truth of this in the vineyard which produces the far-famed Johannisberger, situated on the Rhine. A proprietor once had it heavily dunged, and the quality was perceptibly injured for many years following, though the yield was increased. The wine makers state that the most of grapes grown on the upland clay soil is richer than that from the flatter lands of the Lake islands, or from sandy soils.

SEASONABLE HINTS.—The frost ha laid an embargo on the cultivation of the soil, but something may still be done to protect fruit trees from damage from stock, rabbits, mice, etc.

It is well to encourage the growth of low branches, as they shade the trunks from the rays of the sun, and also prevent the growth of the sun, and also prevent the growth of the standard of the st the growth of suckers. If stock are allowed to browse in orchards they will destroy all the branches within reach.
In former numbers of the Western Ru ral we have described various methods o protecting trees from the attacks of rab-bits and mice. The most effectual pre-ventive of their inroads is their extirpa-tion from the orehard and its vicinity. Arrangements should be made for re moving surface water from around the trees, where it sometimes collects during thaws, and by freezing on the return of frost, causes serious injury to the roots.— Surface drains should be made in all parts of the orchard where it is possible for wa-ter to lodge. Trees that have been transplanted lately require to be examined and straightened, if they have been bent by the wind. A mulch of short manure will be a great protection to the roots in winter and a promoter of their growth in summer. Long manure should not be used, as it encourages mice about the trees.— Western Rural.

TRAINING OF HORSES.—There are a few very simple common sense rules which, if followed, will commend themselves to the horse as well as to the trainer, viz:

1st.—Always/cct kindly toward a horse, no matter what he does to you, and consequently never show "t member the horse knows instinctively how you feel.

2d.—Never go near a horse if you are afraid of him; the horse will know it and take advantage of it, before you acknowledge if yourgalf. edge it yourself.

3d.—Never undertake anything with a horse that you do not know you can curry out.

4th.—" Make haste slowly," teaching want of him, as a the animal what you want of him, as a child learns its A-B-C-s, one letter at a time, being sure he knows each simple thing before you attempt to teach another; add repeal lessons often.

5th.—Reward each effort to do as you wish whether learn and the standard of the st wish, whether he means it or does it as wish, whether he means it of does it ac-cidentally.

6th.—Be sure that it is your will and not his that conquers every time.

Following these rules, you may make a horse do almost anything, if he has not been spoiled before you get him.

Cas Tar.—The use of gas or coal tar in destroying insects is well known to some of our readers. There is nothing that will more quickly kill orehard caterpillars than a slight touch on a swab.—Cotton batting dipped in it and placed around the stems of trees, taking care not to get much on the bark will prevent in around the stems of trees, taking care not to get much on the bark, will prevent insects from climbing; and some aver that they have thus excluded the curcuilo—an imperfect exclusion, however, so long as these insects mount on their wings. Its preservative effects on wood are well known. Posts soaked in the hot tar for a few minutes, if quite dry, will become very durable, care being taken that the tar extends a little above ground. It has been used with success on those parts of hot and green houses liable to decay.—The Gardner's Monthly contains, however, a statement of P. Henderson of its destructive effects on plants when used as a coating for hot water pipes. The heat of the pipes expelling the acrid gases, injured or destroyed in one instance plants valued at two or three thousand dollars, merely for the want of knowledge contained in this sentence. Tar applied to other parts of the house not subject to heat, appeared to do no harm, heat, appeared to do no harm,

THE IRISH POTATO.—We would call the attention of our American farmers to the fact that the Philadelphia Agricultural Society has appointed a committee of three of their most competent members to examine into and report upon the new and best varieties of the Irish potato, for the table as well as for stock. Since the disease of the favorite Mercer, much attention has been given to the subject of a potato crop, and our Society could not have taken up a more important subject than a full investigation of the United States potato crop, ranking in importance to millions, with the other great staples of our country—wheat, corn, cotton, &c.

We learn that the committee, James W. Thompson, M. D., No. 333 South Twelfth street, John McGowan, Esq., No. 26 South Seventh street, Philadelphia, invite assistance in views and specimens of cultivation, which may be left at 1120 Market street, —Rural Advertiser. THE IRISH POTATO.-We would call FLOWER GARDEN AND LAWN.—Plan in winter that which is to be executed in spring. If the weather serves, something can be done towards laying out walks, and in making other improvements. If tender shrubs or other plants are without winter protection, give it before severe freezing comes on.

Climbers, such as Wistarias, climbing roses, etc., will in very cold localities do much better if laid down and covered with a little earth.

Lawns will appreciate a good lawns will apprecia with a little earth.

Lawns will appreciate a good dressing of composted manure, which may be applied any time in winter.

Evergreens nor close shrubs should not be broken by accumulated snow. Shake it out before it becomes ice.

Rustic baskets, vases, seats, etc., may be made indoors. Branches of Cedar, Laurel, Wild Grape, and many other things may be used for the purpose.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND—4. thm.

AMAN OF A THOUSAND—A Consumptive Cured,—Dr. R. IAMES, a returned physician of great eminence, discovered, while in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Conghs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was sixen up to due. His child was cured, and is now alive and well. Desirous of benefitting his fellow mortals, he will sond to those who wish it the recipe, containing full directions for making and successfully using this remedy, free, on recipe of their names, with two stamps to pay expenses. There is not a single symptom of Consumption that it does not at once take hold of and dissipate. Night sweats, peevishness, irritation of the nerves, failure of memory, difficult expectoration, sharp pains in the lungs, sore throat, chilly sensations, masseauat the Stomach, inaction of the bowels, wasting away of the muscles.
