Poetical. Arose the glittering ice to glide, The lone glacial deep and wide.

No skater swims the broad glacial, Whose skates can ring so blithe a tune;

And none can ring so loud a note, In point of speed, with Harold Wain!

She smiles her sweetest smile at me, I know how earnest she could be;

And none can ring so loud a note, In point of speed, with Harold Wain!

"If you would win me for your bride, You must first win my heart and soul;

And none can ring so loud a note, In point of speed, with Harold Wain!

"If you would win me for your bride, You must first win my heart and soul;

And none can ring so loud a note, In point of speed, with Harold Wain!

"If you would win me for your bride, You must first win my heart and soul;

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR JOHN W. GEARY.

Fellow-citizens.—Honored by the selection of the sovereign people of my native State as their choice for Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania...

It is with mingled feelings of joy and gratitude that I have appeared in the presence of my fellow countrymen and before the Searchers of Conscience, to take the solemn obligation prescribed as a qualification for that exalted station...

Profoundly sensible of everything that is implied by this manifestation of the people's confidence, and more deeply impressed with the weight of the responsibilities of the office, than I could have been...

Like countries of the Old World, our country has been and is being sorely tried, and during which "War's" blighting influences principally upon those unfortunate States whose people were against the government, and not without a sacrifice of blood and treasure...

It is in the midst of this trying and trying period that I have the honor to appear before you, and to take the solemn obligation prescribed as a qualification for that exalted station...

It is in the midst of this trying and trying period that I have the honor to appear before you, and to take the solemn obligation prescribed as a qualification for that exalted station...

Miscellaneous. VIVIER, the celebrated horn-player, is one of those men of whom an anecdote is told—an eccentric insister upon having his own way, and his own way being whimsically peculiar.

In England he made a great sensation with his first concert, and invitations to play at private parties were sent him in abundance.

On the day after, accordingly, a noble lord called upon the artist, and giving a pull to his cravat in the English style, he said, with his hat on, in bad French:

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

"You must come to-morrow evening and play for the Duchess of Sutherland."

always be approaching the higher, and the higher still rising. A church purified of superstition solves part of this problem.

Nothing, after the education of the people, contributes more to the security of the State than a thorough military system.

The fathers of the Republic, acting upon the great principle of the separation of powers, embodied this knowledge among the primary obligations of the citizen.
