Either in the barn, or wood-shed, or down cellar, and there I left it; look till ye find it." And so the boy runs till he is out of breath and patience, meanwhile thinking, if not speaking hard thoughts about his slack father. A half dozen places have to be searched before the tool is found, and if haply it is found, it is quite likely to be broken, or rusted, or much out of order. "Father, where is the hand saw?" inquires James Brown. "Why do you ask, James? it is where it always is, when not in use, hauging on the hook near the window, in the tool-room." James goes, where he should have gone at first, and he finds it in perfect trim; and he puts it back again in its place, when he is done with it, knowing that he will get a sound reprimand if he does not return it to its place. Now, we do but repeat what we have often said, that on the farm there should be a place foreverything, and everything in its place. There is no use in trying to carry on a farm or to do anything else well, without system and order. And the care of tools is an important part of that system. Also a great assortment or ourchased from the well known house of AR-NULD, CONSTABLE & CO., New York, ered upon it previous to 1881, when, Mr. Conant commenced operations. He neither plated vines nor sowed the seeds, having found, by experience, that "whenever any meadow adapted to the cultivation of the cranberry is properly prepared, vines will spring up and bear spontaneously." Two loads of sand were spread upon the jee in the winter of 1863, which greatly increased the productiveness of the vines on the spots where the sand was applied. Of the crops for the five years past, Mr. Conant gives the following particulars:

The first summer after preparing the meadow as stated, vines sprang up and grew considerably on the lowest parts of it. The second summer the vines increased and grew rapidly. In the fall of that year I gathered about a half bushel of cranberries. In 1864, the vines blossomed full, and after the berries were set, gave promise of a fine crop; but an early frost, while they were quite green, injured them so that I gathered but about a bushel. In 1865 the vines had increased in some spots on the meadow, so that they had almost killed out the grass, and in the fall, when the berries were ripe, and so thick that the vines were scarcely visible. I gathered twenty bushels of cranberries, worth three and a half dollars per bushel. The expense of gathering and marketing the barrels was less than ten dollars. This year, 1866, there are but very few cranberries in this section of country, though my vines are bearing better that I have seen any others on fresh meadow. SQUASHES AND COWS.—At the meeting of the State Agricultural Society, Judge Osborne was called upon to make some remarks upon the effect of Boston squashes on the milk cows, and said in reply, that he had been trying the experiment whether the farmer, could not use the squashes he was in the habit of taking to market. For this purpose he had fed the beet kinds of garden produce to his cattle, feeding them with cabbage until January, and then with squashes. Had planted corn four feet apart, and every fourth hill was planted with squashes alone, in order that the squashes might have full benefit of sun. There is as much in a squash of the size of a man's hat, as in a pumpkin five times as large. Since he had fed the Marrow squashes to his cattle, he had noticed the excellence of the milk, and that without any bad taste. This squash matures in January, when the strong squashy taste disappears. They should be kept out just ahead of the frost, and by care will last till March. There are spots upon them, but not enough to cause serious injury. His object was to know whether a farmer who had a milch cow could get a good return in butter for his farm labor. Thought that seven quarts of milk would make a pound of butter. If he can produce in winter time a good article of butter, free from the usual bitter taste, keep the cow in good health, and get a proper return for his labor, this is what the farmer needs. It gives fifty pounds a day to the cow, and this is liberal feed. Probably the squashes could be raised as well separately as with the corn. an experienced cutter, and an experienced cutter, and will be paid to putting up customer work in an experience and most ashionable styles,
