We have received the following trans-lation of an article by Prof. Illenkoff, Moscow, Russia, from a friend in Wash-ington. The process is not altogether diew, but as the success of such operations de-pends often upon minute dotails, we are glad to publish it. Prof. I. says: "It was a matter of importance with me to discov-er a method by means of which every farmer might be enabled to prepare bones for his meadows and fields. As great masses of salts are accumulating in the ashes of every household, and most of them with those burning wood, I used alkalles in connection with unslaked lime, which soon dissolved the bones. To my friend and pupil, Mr. Alex. Engel-hart, to whom I communicated my dis-covery, belongs the honor of having in-troduced a new and convenient process for glaing manure for agricultural use. I give it in an extract. "Supposyou have 4,000 pounds of bones, you need 4,000 pounds of ashes, (averag-ing 10 per cent. of carbonate of potash), 600 pounds of unslaked lime, and some $4,500 lbs. (55 glallons) of water. Dig a hole some two feet deep, large enough to receive the bones and one half their vol-ume besides: parallel to this, you dig another one, 25 per cent. Integer, both be-ing filled with bones. First, slake the lime and mix with your ashes, covering 2,000 pounds of the hones in the smaller one. Then it is filled with water, and left. When it gets dry, add, continually, water enough to keep it wet. When the the whole mass out, and spread it over those bones in the second hole, leaving the decomposition to go on. When this is done, let the mass dry; and to make it diffor use, add pact gouder or mellow gan-den soil until its well dried and powdery. Let it be shoveled over several times, and the mapply to your fields. "The pits used in this process muse of reakalies, and 6 per cent. of nitrogen.'" The bits used in this process muse to reak of alkalies, and 6 per cent. of nitrogen in ny soil, and a water-tight pit he made.
