ed much trouble where sulphur and other remedies were promptly applied.— One of our editors, finding that mildew had appeared upon his vines, followed the suggestion of Mr Lazaris, of Athens, Greece, which was published in the lop-rivaliarist, for August, 1866. Mr L. pro-posed the use of dry clay or any other ine dust, as a substitute for sulphur. He considered that when used in the open air, sulphur acted merely as an absorbent of moisture, and if this were the case, any other dry powder thrown upon the mil-dew would dry it up and destroy it. He found dry and sifted clay and line road dust were equally effectors with sulphur. Without asserting that the fact is proven, the instance above cited shows that, in that case at least, the use of dust arreated the sulfew' and that the matter is one deserving the attention of grape growers. The fact that some collivators find that a mixture of air-staked line and sulphur is better than sulphur alone, seems to point to the same conclusion. Overhearing is also a common fault; it serves to weaken the while a large number of bunches may be obtained, they will be inferior in both size and quality. — mane places there is complaint of the silver of the grapes to set well, very large clusters often having but three ar four, and damp weather just at the oritical po-riod of blossoning. We look forward with much interest to the grape harvest this autumn, as the status of many of the new-er kinds will be better known y and its our intention to keep our readers advised of all that is likely to interest them in re-rot while will be better known y and its out intention to keep our readers advised of all that is likely to interest them in re-lation to this increasingly important branch of horiculture. At the West, the practice of drilling is coming into favor. Those who have their farms sufficiently cleared of stumps, and can own a drill, generally use the instrument. There are many patented drills, which cost from $20 up-wards. Some, drawn by two horses, sow eight inches apart, and make eight drills at a time. We found at Terre Haute, Ind., a sulky cultivator and drill com-bined, costing $55. In that neighborhood the sale of drills is increasing very fast. The advantage of drill are that it saves seed, which in the case of wheat is a very important item ; that it gives the grow-ing grain more air and sunlight, and guards against winter killing. It plants the seed at a very uniform depth ingthe bottom of a narrow trench, the sides of which erumble under the action of the frost, and cover the roots of the plant, if they are thrown out. The conviction is universally in favor of the practice, and a good drill will prove agood investment. CARPETS! CARPETS! Drilling Wheat. NO. 13 SOUTH HANOVER STREET. to C. L.
