Agricultural.

THE CROPS AND THEIR RESULTS.

The grand finality which was, or rather which is, to recuperate the exhausted vitality of the country, has arrived. We have the most enormous crops that the country has been blessed with in years. The high prices which have ruled thus far during the year, for all kinds of provisions, make the crop subject a theme of unusual interest, and more than that the knowledge that this ject a theme of unusual interest, and more than that, the knowledge that this crop, in value, exceeds all the other great yearly productions, by scores of immons, rends manmonal interest, especially where the great industries of the country have been languishing, and miscellaneous commerce has become stagnant, partly through the scarcity of the breadstuffs we are now so liberally supplied with. The weather has been a toolc of great importance in connecsupplied with. The weather has been a topic of great importance in connection with these crops, and it is a most fortunate circumstance for us all that the influence of the Gulf Stream did not affect the atmosphere of the grain growing regions, or famine, instead of plenty, might have been our fate. The deluging rains have been conflued to the sea coast, and the most harm we fear is a partial destruction of the potato crop. The general reports from all parts of the country are favorable, and a bountiful return for the labors of the husbandman is now almost beyond a doubt. The past few weeks have witnessed an immense gathering of all the small fruits, excepting cherries. The continual rains have produced a rot in this department, at least in this vicinity. Cherries have sold as high as forty cents a pound, retail, which is an indication of their extraordinary scavety.

noon, at one cent a quart. In this case they were the smaller variety. The lar-ger and handsomer fruit generally com-mands fair prices, and afforded the culmands and prices, and another the curtivator a good profit.

At the West we learn that an entire crop was sold on the ground at the rate of $1,000 an acre, for some forty acres, destined for the Chicago market, where they command a higher figure than with us. Raspberries have been abunlear toyled at good prices. This fruit dant and sold at good prices. This fruit never gluts the market. Currants have been plenty, and at fair rates, but not so cheap as strawberries. Cherry currants eation of their extraordinary scarcity.--Strawberries were never better or plen-tier, and the markets have at times been glutted. We saw them sold in Fulton market, on a certain Saturday after-cheap as strawberries. Cherry currants have sold at 10 to 20 cents per pound, wholesale.

The wheat harvest of the South is gathered, and the relief to the necessities of the starving districts is great, indeed. The Washington Agricultural Bureau reports an increase of hand equal to 27 per cent devoted to this grain, and the yield has been immense.

In the western States the yield has been equally great. Missouri, Illinois and Southern Kansas report a like return. The aggregate in bushels of the wheat crop is set down at 200,000,000.

Rye is much less cultivated, but the accounts are favorable from the quarters Rye is much less cultivated, but the accounts are favorable from the quarters where it is grown. Oats and barley are doing well in the sections where they are raised. Of corn we as yet cannot prognosticate. This is an important crop, and the influence of the wet weather upon it is anything but favorable. The reports are, however, encouraging, without being very definite. We shall know all about corn at the close of September. Grass and hay have done know all about corn at the close of September. Grass and hay have done well; butter and cheese have been plenty, and of good quality; inasmuch as hay will probably be abundant for the balance of the year, and indeed quite into the Spring of '98, the butter market will rule lower than for years, for the coming nine months. The apple crop, and also that of the pear, will not be yery large—scarcely an average in the wery large—searcely an average in the East—on account of the peculiar season. Whatever the West may have to spare in those lines can be sold at good prices in the New York market. Of the grape prop we have some fears. The season has been too wet for this fruit near the sea coast, and we must look to the interior for a liberal supply. We find a large percentage of fruit on the vines of the control of the co large percentage of fruit on the vines now decaying, and grapes under glass are suffering heavily from mildew.—Peaches from Jersey and Delaware are in plenty, but universally lack flavor.—The season has been too wet for this crop. They look well, and hold their old habit of large size and color, but we find them all deficient in high flavor.—It is well known to fruit-growers that too much moisture to the roots, though increasing the size of fruits, generally produces an insipid character.

In the South, cotton, coru and tobacco are, under all circumstances, fair.—In the Mississippi Valley the breaks in the levees have been scrious, and carried destruction in all sections, and near the

in the Mississippi Valley the breaks in the levees have been serious, and carried destruction in all sections, and near the seaboard excessive rains and overflows have done grant damage, but upon the whole, the crops have been encouraging over the South generally. In North Mississippi also, a large proportion of the land is devoted to breadstuffs, cotton looks healthy, but suffers for want of that cultivation given to it in the olden—perhaps, we should say golden—days of prosperity, when the nigger knew his place and his duties, and did the latter, in the main, with cheerfulness. In western Tennessee, two-thirds of the land is-in corn and other grain, of which the latter, now gathered, has been a fair yield. In southern Georgia the negsoes are said to be working very well, and oats are a good crop, wheat good, corn promising well, and fruits never did better. At the latest advices, the cotton crop is quite promising. The estimate is from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bales, and apprehension is felt that the price will fall so low as to result in loss to the producer. It must be remembered that it costs more than double the price per pound, to raise cotton to-day, that it did seven years ago. One of the most discouraging facts connected with cotton raising, is the tax which, when the Democratic party get into power, will be the first matter attended to. It seems to have been a leading principle with the present party in power not only to humiliate, but to crush out the South, and rab white men of their bread and meat.

The wealth of this country in breadstuffs depends largely upon the money-well with the present party in power not only to humiliate, but to crush out the south of the general in Evree well and stated the country in breadstuffs depends largely upon the money-well with the present party in power not only to humiliate, but to crush out the south. The wealth of this country in breadstuffs depends largely upon the moneyed value of the cereals in Europe. Ten per cent of our heavy crops often go there, and we have reason to believe that the demand from abroad will be very light, as the harvests are reported large. In Europe, as here a general abundance in the agricultural line is expected. If such is the case, people can count upon cheap food for men and beast. And inasmuch as the great item of agriculture is more than equal, in its moneyed value, to all our other products and manufactures, if agricultural products rule low, everything else rules low also. We therefore may be allowed to expect, in the event of an abundant The wealth of this country in bread-
