The following points of law relative tled by a decision of the Supreme Court | N E W G O O D S!! of this State:

A tenent of a farm, under a lease A ten int of a farm, under a lease from year to year for agricultural purposes, is entitled to the way-grown crop, and such letting must be presumed to have been made, if nothing to the contrary be said. This implication cannot be rebutted by implication of bad husbadnry, and a trespass by the landlord in destroying the tenant's crop, after the expiration of the lease, cannot be institled by an alleged breach of conafter the expirationer the mass, change the justified by an alleged breach of contract. If there be had husbandry, the remedy is by sait, and not by confiscation of the tenant's rights. There being a crop in the ground, whether good or bad, the tenant had a right to it, and to take it away when it ripened. The opinion of the Court, delivered by Judge Thompson, was as follows: By the custom, or as it has been called, the the custom, or as it has been called, the common law of Pennsylvania, the tenant of a farm under a lease from year to year for agricultural purposes, is entitled to the way grown crop. This is the law in view of which such letting must be presumed to have been made, if nothing to the contrary be said. In the case before us, this implication was attempted to be redutted by proof of the case before us, this infinite for water med to be rebutted by proof of bad husbandry in the case, the redress for that was by suit, and not by confiscation of the tenaut's rights. The jury have found that the plauntif left a fall have found that the paintiff left if the crop in the ground when he left the premises, and have estimated its value in the damages given. There being a crop in the ground, therefore, whether good or bad, the plaintiff had a right to it, and to take it away when it ripened; and this being found by the verdict, and that the defendant destroyed it, there was an end of the unitter.

SURFACE MANUSING .- Ploughing manure deep under the surface is a great mistake. The feeding roots oplants keep as near the surface as they can consistently with avoidance of light. The manure should, of course, be near where the feeding roots are. Again, manure is of no service until it has thoroughly decayed away. The great agent in this work of disintegration is oxygen, and this can only operate through the atmosphere. Thus because air is necessary to prepare manure, and because plants feed near the top, surface manuring is correct in principle. In practice it is not always profitable, but t is much oftener than people think so. Most good farmers are now of this opinion. John Johnson, the great New York farmer, says in a communication to an agricultural journal: "I am not surprised at your correspondent Buckeye being opposed to surface manuring. I should have been so myself, had not experience taught me better. I have used manure only as a top dressing for the last twenty-six years, and I do think that one load used in that way is worth far more than two ploughed under our stiff land. I learned by experience never to dispute any practice in farm-ing until I had tried it. It was an able writer on pigeon weed, more than thirty-five years ago, that cured my self-confidence."

Poultry. - A pullet hatched early in the spring begins to lay at the approach of winter, and pollets hatched late in the summer begin to lay in the ensueing spring, and it is by saving a certain proportion of pullets from the early and late broods that you make sure of winter eggs, a few early hatched chick-ens for catching the highest markets, and a numerous flock of chickens in warm months when rearing is most precarious. The hen continues in her prime for two, and at most three years, therefore, save every year pullets equal to one third of your brood stock, selling off at a trifling price the same number of a 'ed hens, or offering them up in a stewed dish or a well baked pie. However, I have no scruples about keeping a heavy, symmetrically made "parlat" for four years, for the sake of her stock. Many feroners crumble about their precarious. The hen continues in her Many farmers grumble about their poultry, from not paying attention to such a simple matter as their not looking over their brood stock once a year drafting all the old dames (known by the developed scales on their legs) and reserving from the market basket the most promising young pullets raised during the season.

during the season. Pumpkins Amongst Corn.—Almost all "oil fashi ned farmers" take off a crop of pumpkins from their cornfields, much to the annoyance of the theorist who demonstrates to his entire satisfac-tion that the one crop must detract from the full force of the other. But the most careful experiments show no loss to the corn. The same weight results from an acre, with or without the pump kins. It does at first thought, seem as if it ought not to be so. If it take just so many bushels of corn to fatten a hog, It is not clear how we are to fatten two from the one quantity. This is the ar-gument of the theorizer. But the facts are as we have stated; and the reason probably is, that the pumpkin and the corn feed on entirely different foods in the soil, so that the one can go on with-out the other.

To Procure Large Strawbernies.—Remove the soil around each hill to the depth of an inch or more, without disturbing the roots; then without disturing the roots; then spread evenly, over an area of twenty inches in diameter, a pound or more of pulverized linseed med, and cover it with mellow soil; then spread a mulching of hay or straw two inches deep over the entire surface between the hills. Should the weather be warm hills. Should the weather be warm and dry a liberal supply of warm water daily will greatly promote the growth of both vines and berries. Pull up the both vines and berries. weeds and grass among growing straw-berries rather than cut them up with hoes, as a system of roots is formed near the surface of the ground which should not be injured with a broad hoe.

Poor Author's or Editor's Pub DING.—Flavor a quart of new milk by boiling in it a few minutes half a stick of well bruised cinnamon, or the rind of a small lemon; add a few grains of sal and three ounces of sugar, and turn the whole into a deep basin. When it is quite cold, stir to it three well beater eggs, and strain the mixture into a pie dish. Cover the top entirely with slices of bread, free from crust, half an inch thick, and buttered on both sides.3— Bake the pudding in a moderate oven half an hour half an hour. "Who ever heard of an Editor's bread being buttered on both sides?

Hydrophobia.—An aged german forest-keeper, who is on the verge of death; has published a secret cure for hydrophobia, which he says he has used hydrophobia, which he says ne mas used with success for fifty years, saving many men and animals from a horrible death. The wound must be bathed as soon as possible with warm vinegar and water, and when this has dried, a few drops of the world water and when the same than the world. muriatic acid pecured upon the wound will destroy the poison of the saliva and relieve the patient from danger. This cure appears in the I cipsic Journal, and we give it as we find it.

GARDEN PATHS.—Nothing makes hetter garden paths than coal ashes; they are of more value for that purpose than any other they can be applied to. Where the path requires it dig it out two or three inches—put the coarsest ashes at the bottom and the finest at the top, to the depth of from four to six packes and then real well. Paths washingles and then real well. inches, and then roll well. Paths made in this way are always dry and pleasant to the feet, and are seldom troubled with weeds.
