ULYSSES

"H-l and furies!" cried the Captain, struggling flercely. "Let go of me this instant!" "Of course we will," said one of the "Of course we will," said one of the men mockingly. "Oh no, you don't, my dear boy; you don't slip out of our clutches now, if you are called 'Slippery Jack." "Susie at first thought these were high-waymen, but as she saw they did not make any attempt to rob him, she gained courage, and asked: "Is he not Captain Walters?" "Well, my dear," answered the police-. man, "he may be called that for all 1 know, because he's had so many adiases that I don't believe he knows his own name; but he's generally called 'Slippery Jack,' and he's as big a scoundrel as there is unhung." Who rode the pony round the ring, Though pony tried his load to fling, Pleasing papa with this great thing? Who left the army in disgust, Who bought a wooded farm on trust? And sold his wood and took his bust? Ulysses, Who droys the Hebrews from his camp, Into the Alligator swamp, Jack,' and he's as big a scoundrel as there is unhung." Susie grew faint—staggered and fell in-to the arms of Burt Andrews! The policemen dragged their prisoner away, and Susie fell on Burt's breast, solving as if her heart would break. "Oh, Burt, to think that I cast your love away from me for such a man as that! Can you ever forgive me?" Burt, kissed her fondly for a reply. Farmer Dowe looked very stern when the facts were told him, but at last he re-lented. Who, worthy at those faithless Jews, Who kept Pa's share of cotton dues, All further permits did retuse? Who licensed chaps that would divide With father Jesse, Argus-eyed, Who cleaned the hair and eke the hide? Who was it played ad interim For, Johnson, and bamboozied him By re-enstating Stanton grim? Well, child," he said at last, "you Who takes his pay in solid gold, And asts that all who bonds do hold ? Be paid in sterling coin and gold ? have learned a lesson you needed, at any rate—that all that glitters is not pure gold." Who has no tongue, no words, no speech. Who knows no principles to teach, Yet hopes the height of power to reach? After all, what is the use? We set up our house, and one by one our children fly into it, like birds out of some foreign woods into a enge-one, two, three, four and more. With each one comes a ery, and that is the key-note to which a hun-dred sorrows add their voices and gradu-ally swell into the strange chorus which men call human life. For each child there is to be a fringe of care on the edge of every day. Each child brings burdens and anxietics. Tears in their cyces are but harbingers of many more in the eyes of all who love them 1. To shape them from infancy to goodness, to teach their hands, to drill their heads, to repair their mistakes and secure their firm footing in an honorable manhood, who can meas-ure the thought, the feeling, the endea-vors? And then, when the long task is done, is there no compensation? Or do they not, one by one detach themselves, and, like comely fruit, fall from the bough on which they grew, leaving it bare and empty? The daughter-just as she began to be After all, what is the use? We set up " "Oil for't care; you are a tyrant, and you know it. Just because that hand, like conely fruit, fall from the you know it. He picked it up, and tossed it into the brook close by, and walked out of the garden gate just as Capitain Walter, the cause of the trouble, walked up the lane. Susie was in no humor to receive Capit. Walters just then; in fact, she felt just like having a "good cry;" but she would not let Burt think she cared; so holding out her hand to Capt. Walters, she bade him "good evening."

Be it understood that not one cent of the regular pay or mileage of members of Congress is included in the foregoing Ta-ble. The salary of members of Congress is $5000 a year and twenty cents per mile for travelling from their homes to Wash-ington and returning. The first item examined is that of Stationery. And see how that item has increased: out her hand to Chpt. Walters, she bade "Just as I thought," muttered Burt to himself, as he looked back and saw her actions. "Well, she's not worth think-ing about; I'll forget her." This was ea-ing about; I'll forget her." This was ea-ing about; I'll forget her." This was ea-to rest if then done marry and settle down around their childhood home. But this is rare in America. The endless circulation Stationery for 1864,

The members of Congress are allowed by law a certain amount for Statiovery— if they do not draw the full amount they are entitled to, they draw the balance in money. So that while the pay of each member is $5000 and mileage he really gets about $5000, being $5000 and mileage in money and the balance in trade, such as books, paper, gold pens, pocket-knives, selssons, gold penels, kid gloves, visiting cards of the latest French style, and various other articles too tedious to mention.
