says that the delightful winter evenings are again with us, and already the gatherings around the fireside are growing interesting and attractive. The nights now come on at six o'clock, and in consequence we have four long hours until bed time to devote to amusement and study. The endearments of home constitute a world of pleasure in themselves, and, when associated with mental and moral improvements, they lead up a step higher than the ordinary level of life.— The whisperings of a mother's love, the kind counsels of the grey-haired sire, mingling, as they sometimes do, with younger and happier voices, give to the family circle an attraction and value which are not to be found elsewhere

among the haunts of men. Why men will sometimes wander from their homes and firesides to seek for happiness and enjoyment elsewhere, when every grace and affection is natural and centered there, is not only a wonder but a mystery. There may be instances where homes are not as happy and attractive as they should be. Cases of misplaced confidence and love, which alas, are destined, too often, too often, to be turned into gall and bitterness; but these are but rare. There is no place, as a general thing, where the same measure of wordly peace and comfort can be found, as around our own fireside, be it ever so humble in its character. The plain hut of the fisherman upon the storm-beaten shore, is often preferable, so far as treasures of the heart are concerned, to the dwellings and habitations of kings and princes. Where the light and joy of pure, unadulterated love reside, there is all of in this world, has a right to anticipate.

But our winter evenings are productive of vast and infinite improvements, when they are properly appropriated. Reading change of those thoughts and sentiments which pertain to our higher interests; a just comprehension of our true character and destiny-these of right belong to the lessons and teachings of the fireside and bring the family altar nearer, if possible to the throne of God. A word or two spoken in season, and the breathing of the pure spirit of prayer, in kindred gatherings, have often shed illuminations over the pathway, which have lighted men in triumph to the grave. Let us therefore cherish and value our winter evenings at home. They have a comfort not found elsewhere, a religion without pretense or bigotry, a general philosophy which will bear the test of criticism, and a hope that carries us far beyond the or-dinary trials and struggles of this life.

COMING.—Now is the time of year when every one begins to look forward to the coming of the holidays. The young, especially, manifest more than the usual amount of anxiety, as they inquire what day of the week Christmas will be here. All know that it will be on the twentyfifth of December, for that has become a historic fact, but it requires a consultation with the almanac to find out what time in the week the anniversary of the Saviour's birth will be commemorated .-This year the long wished for day will come on Friday, and it is not far off. Today is the tenth of December, and Christmas is rapidly approaching. A few more. diurnal revolutions of the earth and it will be at our doors, with all its sacred associations, its holy memories, its mirth, its gaieties and rejoicings. As though in anticipation of its coming, preparations are already being made for its advent. The windows of our toy shops and confectionaries have commenced their usual display, and gifts of all kinds, suitable for the holidays, are presented for sale. Many of these will, no doubt, be advertised in the columns of the Volun-TEER in good season, so that our readers will know where to purchase and who has the most desirable stock on hand .-From these, and others that will be added before the day arrives, old Santa is will fill his budget before he makes his entry into our houses, by way of the chimney, the night before. The children will look out for him and welcome his coming. The old and the middle aged will not be at all averse to it but will greet him with a cordial welcome. We say then, let the jolly old fellow come on. He is the most popular and beloved of any of our annual visitors.
