or is said that rats may be effectually driven away from any building by sprinkling their places of resort with yellowochre.

Andrew S. Fuller, author of "Small Fruit Culturist," says that with him coal ashes are worth $3 or $4 a load, especially on sandy land.

Late plowing is beneficial to clay soil intended for tillage next season. Leave without harrowing, thus giving a greatwithout harrowing, thus giving a greater surface for the frost to act on.
Rubbing a horse with water in which walnut leaves have been boiled, will, it is said, prevent his being annoyed with flies. A very strong solution might possibly injure the hair or skin, but we have never heard of such a result.

The Gardener's Monthly says that a result. t revolution has occurred in select great revolution has occurred in sciencing fruit trees for planting. Bushy trees are now sought for. The shade which the side branches make is considered beneficial to the tree. With very low branched trees there is this advantage, that the plow or the spade can not approach very near the trunk In selecting seed-corn, choose the finest ears, and trace together and hang up to dry; it is better done now than in the spring in the crib, and is surer to grow. A stout wire stretched in the grow. A stout wire stretched in the garret of the house or other loft is one of the best things to hang seed-corn on, as it can be easily arranged so as to keep off mice and raits.

Many farmers have noticed in their fields a large black beetle, with most brilliant dots placed in rows on his back.

Dr. Fitch says: "Its eggs produce the Dr. Fitch says: "Its eggs produce the corn grub-killer. It is a most inveterate foe to the cut-worm, grasping the worm in its strong Jaws, and, in spite of its violent writhing and struggles, securely holding it. When it finds these worms in plenty, it gorges and surfeits itself upon them till it is so glutted and extended as to be scarcely able to stir, for it never knows how to let a cut-worm alone when he meets him. It is continually hunting these worms, feed-worm alone when he meets him. It is continually hunting these worms, feeding on nothing else if it can obtain them. Both it and the golden-dotted beetle which produces it, therefore, should never be harmed."

The North British Agriculturist attributes much of the disease of stables to the exclusion of the necessary quantity of light, a fair share of which is deemed as essential to animal growth as to vegof light, a fair share of which is deemed as essential to animal growth as to vegetable. When stable 3 or other inclosures are kept in comparative darkness, filth is apt to be overlooked, from which unwholesome gases are continually exhaling, rendering the air unsuitable to the demands of animal life. This conclusion is, in every aspect, a reasonable one, and should challenge the attention of every stock grower. Extreme darkness or garnishness—especially in the case of fottening animals—is to be avoided, as long as this medium line runs the pathway of healthfulness to stable ed, as long as this medium the tans

A good farmer's barometer may be made in the tollowing manner: Take a common glass pickle bottle, widemouthed; fill it within three inches of the top with water, then take a common Florence oil cask, removing the straw covering and cleansing the flask straw covering and cleansing the flask thoroughly, plunge the neck of the flask as far as it will go, and the barometer is complete. In fine weather the water will rise in the neck of the flask, even higher than the mouth of the pickle bottle, and in wet, windy weather it will fall to within an inch of the mouth of the flask. Before a heavy gale of wind the water has been seen to leave the flask alto-ether at least, eight hours the flask altogether at least eight hours before the gale came to its heighth. The invention was made by a German, and communicated to the London Journal. A. Hadley, in a communication to the Northwestern Farmer, gives what he regards as three important reasons why clover should always be grown with timothy. First, the clover being taprooted, penetrates deeply, mellows the soil, stands drougth, and the timothy grows much stronger and holds up the clover. Second, if sown for pasturage, the timothy almost universally prevents the clover from swelling cattle. Thirdly, hay is too binding, especially for cattle, and clover too washy, (succulent,) hence, both together are better than either alone. To these we may add, under the head of the first, where grass comes in rotation, it is of the ut-A. Hadley, in a communication to th grass comes in rotation, it is of the ut-most importance, on a clay soil, that at least a part of this grass crop be clover. It will serve to mellow and loosen the heavy soil in a remarkable degree, so that when turned over with a plow, it will not only be rich, but loose and friable. If on the other hand, timothy alone be sown, (which some do because the hay sells better,) the soil will turn over heavy and clammy, and be unfit for any crop which is to follow. The same correspondent says that he is partial to rye for ealf or sheep pasture, which he occasionally sows in the summer or autumn, after a crop of corn; and then, after being pastured winter and spring, it is turned under for a spring erop—corn, if the soil be strong enough—or it may be allowed to go to harvest.

enough—or it may be allowed to go to harvest.

Dr. F. M. Hexamer made the following statements before the New York Farmers' Club: The pot ito is not a root proper, but an underground branch; the eyes are in fact buds, and their arrangement in the tubes is such that a spiral line going through each eye will be nearly parallel to itself.—This shows a certain regularity, like that of buds on a branch. The eye is the germinating part, but such is the vigor of the productive tendency of the productive tendency of the product, that if one is cut into pieces, none of which contain an eye, one of five of these eyeless pieces sprout. He pared a number of potatoes, cutting below the eyes, and yet they germinated. Hence, he concludes that there is no use in taking special care of theeyes. "For several years," he said, "I have tried by experiments to solve the question of the best mode of planting potatoes, and my observation is, that when the potatoe is planted whole, all the germinative power will concentrate in the terminal eye. Out of one hundred hills, only two will develop side shoots; but cut the seed end off, and two, three or four eyes nearest the cut surface will start and divide the nutriment in the potato between them." Dr. II, gave the result of seventeen different ways of planting the potatoe. He obtained the best results from putting one large whole potato in a hill; the next from a large half potato cut lengthwise, and nearly the same result when the larger potato had its seed end cut off. The lowest yield was from half of a small potuto; one piece with an eye did a little better. He finds the greater the yield the larger the amount in proportion of large potatoes; and he is satisfied that the size of the pieces is not the most important point in planting; but he uses no small potatoes for seed. A medium sized potatoe be plants whole, cuts large ones in two pieces, and the largest in four pieces, always taking care to select sound and well developed potatoes.

Horse Manger.—It is said that an excellent horse manger may be constructed on the following plan: A box or large tube, two and a half feet by two feet, and as high as the floor of the hay mow, is set up between two stalls in a small manger. The bottom of this box is two inches larger each way than the top, so as to prevent the hay from ever becoming wedged in or stuck. A semicircular opening, one foot in the highest place, is cut into the bottom of the box inade the manger. Inside the manger and on the opposite end is placed the box to feed grain; if cut feed is used, the whole manger can be taken if necessary. The manger should not exceed one foot in height and two feet wide.—Horses have no difficulty in drawing out the hay from the bottom of this box or tube, and will not waste a particule. The hay is kept clean and sweet until caten by the horses. Horse Manger.-It is said that an
