Agricultural.

[From Dritz's Experimental Farm Journal.]

EXPERIMENTS WITH COAL ASHES.

It is generally thought in the country that the ashes of mineral coal are not only useless as a fertilizer and improver of the soil, but that on the contrary, they are hurtful. Hence you see that farmers reject these ashes, greatly to the detriment of agriculture, while quantities of them might be procured from the iron works with no other cost than that of gathering them.

It is, therefore, interesting to report an experiment undertaken by a correspondent of the Journal de l' Agriculture He filled in the tall three flower pots with pure bitumous coal ashes without mixture of any kind, and sowed in the first wheat, in the second oats, and in the third some strawberry seed. These pots were buried in a bed in his garden and left to themselves.

The germination took place successfully during the winter, and in March following the plants presented a fine appearance. In April, the wheat, oats, and strawberry plants were in fine growth. The wheat and oats ripened perfectly; the berries were large, clear, very well filled, and heavy. The wheat straw attained a height of more than fifty-four inches; that of the oats forty-three inches. As to the strawberry plants they came on finely, and continued to grow well until October, when it became necessary to transplant them. Set out in open ground, they are now the greenest and strongest of all the seedlings.

Thus it is seen that, without the addition of either soil or manure, coal ashes were sufficient in itself, according to this trial, to nourish and bring to maturity both wheat and oats, and to support the growth of strawberry plants during a year. Coal ashes, from its nature, should effect a division of soils, and be very useful in overcoming the stiffness of compact land; it would, then, at the same time, act as a manure and an improver.

This, moreover, should be the case, judging, not only by this experiment just described, but from anylysis made by several chemists, among others Davy, who found that these ashes contained, in proportions varying with the localities whence the coals came, sulphates of potassa and lime, carbonate of lime, clay and silica.

The above experiments have been corroborated, in part, by my own experience. I have found it to pay well the trouble and expense of hauling coal ashes a distance of four miles. The ashes should be screened before spreading upon the fields. The clinkers and cinders are of more service on roads than on cultivated land. Stiff soils are benefited more by coal ashes than any others. Their application tends to loosen them, which alone would make them more productive, if they did nothing else. On an acre, sown with oats, I applied coal ashes, and the yield of grain was much better and the straw much ranker than on any other part of the field.

Though it has generally been alleged that these ashes possess no fertilizing properties, experience, as well as science clearly proves it to be erroneous. They do possess enough to make it pay to gather them in in large quantities. Especially are coal ashes in towns and cities valuable, because some proportion of wood is always consumed with the coal. They can always be had for the trouble of hauling, and in the winter months the expense of doing so is not great, because teams have little to do. They should be used for top dressing grasslands and meadows, and all other other soils that are tough and stiff.

How to Raise A First-rate crop of Potatoes.—"J. M.," Chester Co., Pa. There are many ways of doing this. But as you only enter on the farm this spring, you will work to disadvantage. To obtain the best results, it is necessary to prepare for the crop two or three years beforehand. All that you can do is to select one best land on the farm, put on 400 pounds of Peruvian guano, cultivate thoroughly, and suffer not a weed to grow. A two or three-year old clover sod, on warm, rich, sandy loam, gives a good chance for potatoes. Do not plow until you are ready to plant. Sow the guano broadcast after plowing, and harrow it in, or apply a tablespoonful in each hill, and mix it with the soil. Mark out the rows, both ways, three feet apart, and drop a fair sized potato in each hill. Start the cultivator as soon as the rows can be distinguished, and repeat every week or ten days until there is danger of disturbing the roots. We usually hill up a little, making a broad, flat hill. A tablespoonful of plaster dusted on the young plants soon after they come up will usually do good. We recommend guano because in our experience it does not increase the rot. But it is only fair to add, that we have not found even barn yard manure, it thoroughly rotted and well mixed with the soil the fall previous, half so injurious as some people would have us suppose. If any one will put 25 loads per acre on our potato land, we will agree to plant and run the risk of the rot—but we would use some guano as well. The truth is, that it is useless to expect a large crop of potatoes, say 350 bushels per acre, without plenty of manure.—American Agriculturist.

Cooking Hams.—I have learned much in the half dozen years since I have assumed the responsibility of being my own housekeeper, as to the best mode of boiling a ham. I knew very well that it was spoiling a good ham ever to try it when it can be broiled.—But I found that there were ways of boiling a whole ham so as to ruin it; and this is the way I now boil it: If it be a Maryland or a Virginia ham, or any one rather old or hard, it should be soaked over night in water, then put into a suitable cooking pot of cold water, which should be raised to a gentle boil, or rather simmer, and this should be continued for fifteen minutes for every pound weight of the ham. Then take out; remove the skin, and dust over plentifully of bread crumbs and set in the oven to bake from fifteen to thirty minutes. A ham cooked in this way should be very tender juicy and of fine flavor, provided it was originally good.

If this will assist any one in her knowledge how to improve upon the "old way" of preparing a whole ham for the table, I shall be satisfied. I know very well that if once tried it will always be tried.—Germantown Telegraph.

Preserving Timber.—To builders, gardeners, and others who employ home grown timber for fencing and other purposes, a correspondent in the London Gardener's Chronicle recommends a preventative of dry-rot, which he says has been thoroughly tested by experiment. It consists in soaking the timber for a short time in lime water. A pit or tank, or good sized tank; according to the extent of requirement, will answer the purpose, the lime being added to the water in the proportion of eighty-eight grains to the gallon. Timber prepared in this way is said to stand the weather remarkably well.—Southern Planter.

Horses.—Horses as a general thing get too much licking and too little feed. If a man loses his hat while driving his horse he licks the horse to pay for it.—If he runs into another wagon through his own carelessness he licks his horse to make it all right. If he slips or stumbles he gets licked for it—if he does anything he gets licked, if he don't do anything he gets the same. A great many horses have "a sight" more than their drivers, and if they could change places with them, society at large would be gainers, and so would the horses.

Stoves, Tinware, &c

Economy is Wealth

James McGonigal, at No. 21 south Hanover St, Carlisle, would call the attention of his friends and the public generally to his large stock of which he feels assured will give satisfaction in both quality and price.

STOVES, TIN AND SHEET-IRON WARE,

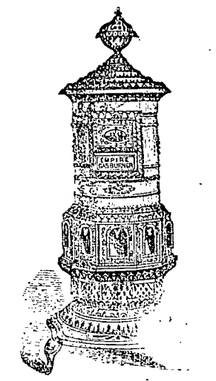
In the stove line he would call especial attention to the "EMPIRE" Gas burner and parlor Heater.



It is a Perpetual Base Burner, and the Fire-pot in the Furnace will last an indefinite period. It is perfect, and no gas can escape from any crack or joint. It has been tried for almost every year. Its consumption of coal at the rate of heat are delivered to the floor warming the feet instead of the face. It is gas consumptive and is perfectly clear from dust. Its ventilation is complete, and the burning gas and ignited coals shine out through its Mica Windows, giving the brightness also of an open fire. It must be seen to be appreciated.

He also offers all the latest and most improved patterns of

and a large stock of cook Stoves consisting of the

Nimrod,

Nest of Tompson

Oriental &c.

and a variety of others all of which are warranted to be first class and to give entire satisfaction.

Tin and Sheet-Iron ware made of the very best material, and all work guaranteed to be as represented. Business kept constantly on hand.

His expenses are trifling, compared with others, as he defies competition, and would ask those desiring anything in his line of business, to interview prices elsewhere, and then give him a call and satisfy themselves that he can sell better articles for less money than any other establishment in the county. His motto is, Small Sales and Small Profits. Old metal taken in exchange.

Spouting, Roofing and Jobbing promptly attended to, made of the best material and at moderate prices.

C. MELLINGER, county Treas'r.
Stoughstown, Nov. 18, 1868.

Mr. A. Marquart.—Dear Sir: I have used about half a bottle of your Liniment on my horse for a bad Collar Gall, which was the most obstinate sore of the kind I ever saw; also on my arm for Rheumatism, and it has given entire satisfaction in both cases. I would not do without it for ten times its cost, and cheerfully recommend it to the public.

WILLIAM W. JACKSON.
Jacksonville, Pa., Nov. 20, 1868.

A. Marquart, Esq.:—Dear Sir: I had a very severe attack of Rheumatism in my back, so that I could scarcely walk, which was very painful. After using half a bottle of your celebrated Liniment, I was entirely cured. This is not a recommendation, but the plain truth.—You can make any use of this you please.

JACOB LONG.
Walnut Bottom, Pa., Nov 20, 1868.

Mr. A. Marquart:—Dear Sir: I have used your valuable Liniment in my family for different pains and ailments, and it has proved satisfactory in every case. I do think, as an external Liniment, it stands without a rival. I would cheerfully recommend it to the public.

Respectfully,
GEORGE W. YOCUM.

A. Marquart, Esq.:—Dear Sir: It affords me pleasure to certify that I have used your Liniment on my neck, in a case of very Sore Throat, which was much swollen and very painful. After two or three applications, I found it to act like magic, and would recommend it as an excellent Liniment.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Family Medicine,

Perhaps no one medicine is more universally required by everybody in each circle, nor was any before so universally adopted into use in every country and among all classes, as the pill called by the above name. The reason is, that this is the most reliable purgative that medical research has yet been able to produce. Every one knows what a cathartic pill should be, and almost every one has tried it, but there is a great difference between them, and few, very few, know which is the best. Ayer's Pills are the result of long years of study, and of an earnest search for the best remedy that could be found, not only for the cure of other people, but for the use of our own children. We have found it in this combination of virtues, and we believe it to be the most perfect pill that can be made. That it is the best we know, because we have tested it, know that it is the best, because it has never failed in any one of the many purposes for which it is required, and because we know more about its composition than we do of any other pill. The secret of this is, that we make them ourselves, and personally superintend every part of their preparation. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of the cures they have done in our neighborhood, but we do not publish them. Such medicine as this must rely upon its own merits to make friends. Where it is known it is valued for the cures it has done, and where it is not known, a trial is all that is necessary to secure confidence in its virtues. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel nor any other drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—restoring the healthy functions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, to bring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such disorders as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listless-ness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken in each case, to correct the disordered action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is of advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better. Their cleansing and renovating effect on the alimentary canal and secretive apparatus.
