Agricultural.

PLOWING BY STEAM,

The N. Y. World contains a description of the trial of a new Englishsteam plow in New Jersey. We quote from the account as follows:

the account as follows:

"The field was in the shape of an oblong squere, and must have contained at least one hundred acres, tolerably level, but uneven from having been in corn the year before. The soil was rather a sandy loam, which had never been cultivated over four inches, and, therefore, below that depth, offered more than usual resistance to the plow. The engines were stationed on each side of the field, opposite to each other, and distant three hundred and seventy yards. They were fired up and had already commenced work. The engines, each fourteen horse power by the English standard, were on the locomotive plan. The plowing apparatus consisted of two gaugs of six each, hung upon an iron frame moving upon three wheels, one of the wheels running in every sixth furrow, each pair easily elevated when not in use. A flexible wire cable was wound round a drum on the under side of the engine, and wound up when the plow was at work by the engine towards which the plow was drawn.—When the plow had reached the opposite side of the field, the signal whistle was blown; that gang which had been elevated was dropped, after both had been elevated was dropped, after both had been elevated on its journey. They were gauged to seven inches deep and some thirteen inches wide, or the six cutting ". The field was in the shape of an ob and started on its journey. They were gauged to seven inches deep and some thirteen inches wide, or the six cutting six feet and a half at each time it crossed the field. The speed was at the rate of the field. The speed was at the rate of five and a half miles per hour, and the work was at the rate of twenty-four acres per day of ten hours. By noon a large crowd had gathered, some to witness the predicted failure, some the ness the predicted ander, some the hoped-for success, and many to gratify curiosity. Among the crowd were many intelligent farmers and gentlemen of that region. After the plow had gone several times across, the most skeptical acknowledged that steam-plowing in "that kind of soil" was an complete success, and that, though the first outlay of capital was larger than in the old way, doing the work by teams and men, yet in the aggregate it would not prove so great as appeared at first view.

When the people had largely assembled, the Colonel directed his manager to have the engines change front, and one of them to go down towards the lower end, or front of the field. And then it was that the magnitude and efficiency of the power which had been harnessed to the ear of agriculture was manifested. The engineer at once started off his huge machine across the damp and yielding and uneven ground with the same ease that a plowman would have unhitched from his plow and driven his team to the opposite end of the field. One could think of nothing the huge clother than the property of the proper ing but a huge elephant, who, obedient to his driver, perched on his back, was shuffling along over the field. A span of mules was hitched to the cable, and it was drawn down and attached to the grubber or cultivator; the cable from the other engine was fastened to the the other engine was fastened to the other end, and it commenced vibrating between the two engines, often at a pace that kept the attendant, when on the ground, at a smart trot to keep up. At this point the interest of the speculators was much heightened by General Capron, the Commissioner of Agriculture, getting on the machine and taking the steering apparatus in hand, and ri-ding several times across the field.— Among the distinguished gentleman present, who seemed to regard the ex present, who seemed to regard the ex-periment with great interest, and to consider it a marked success, was Gen. Fitz John Porter. The universal opin-ion of all was that steam plowing was a marked success. It is only a question of capital and detail."

Improved Method of Swarming. Where bees are left to have their own way in swarming, it is found sometimes that one colony will throw off swarm after swarm, nearly swarming itself to death; while some of the families that come off are feeble and worthless. Then again, another colony full of workers and rich in stores, and which should afford at least one good swarm, will do no such thing, but hang out and threaten, and yet make no decided movement. The following arrangement, it is said, will prove a remedy for this state of things. Suppose I have ten colonies, all numbered as they should be. No. 1, on examination, is found to contain ten queens in embryo, and is therefore capable of supplying ten colonies, if the young queens are and is therefore capable of supplying ten colonies, if the young queens are not destroyed. No. I imangurates the movement and sends off a good strong swarm. Very well. Hive them, and give them their position. Now number 1 has lost half its numbers, and, for the present, its imbabitants are all excited and in commotion, and are ready to receive new comers. Remove number 2 to a new stand, and place number 1 on the old stand of number 2. The workers of number 2 that are out in the fields, will, on their return, flock into workers of number 2 that are out in the fields, will, on their return, flock into number 1, and when the day closes number 1 is again strong in numbers and immediatelyconcludes that it is best to send off another colony, and in about a week a second swarm will come off, hale and strong. Number 2 has lost enough of its numbers to make a swarm, it has indeed swarmed through number 1. It has a prolific queen and is rapidly augmenting its numbers every day, and will soon make up its loss. Meantime number 1 must be placed on the stand of number 3, and number 2 may be taken to the first stand occupied by number 1. Number 1 will be filled right up again as before, and in a day or two will send another strong and vigorous swarm, with a young queen. And thus the process may go on until ten swarms, all strong, have all come through number 1. This plan has been recommended, and it is said to work well. It looks reasonable, and is worthy of trial—P. R. R. R. Serger, in American fields, will, on their return, flock into well. It looks reasonable, and is worthy of trial.—P. R. RUSSELL, in American Bee Journal farmer for forty-six years, gives to the American Agriculturist some notes on his farming practice. Among other things he remarks: "Some men say things he remarks: "Some men say that corn will degenerate and run out. My father got a kind of yellow twelverowed corn in the year of the great celipse, in 1806, which I remember very well. I took it from him in the Spring of 1820, and have it now. It is an early sound torn, very easy to husk. I can raise eighty bushels of shelled corn to the acre, with no extra labor, planting three and a half feet apart each way. I have another kind of eight rowed yellow corn, which I got in 1828, which will grow and ripen in ninety or one hundred days. Wheat, oats and potatoes will degenerate and wear out, with ordinary culture. " We do not harvest our grain and cut our hay carly enough in this country. When I commenced farming I was closely watched by my neighbors, who said I ploughed too deep, cut my hay too early, and cut my grain too green. I have farmed on twelve different farms and the result has been I have tripled the the result has been I have tripled the crops on an average.

Bo On a farm in Illinois stands hearmost red beech tree that, on the ground, forms two different trees, standing six feet apart, the south fork mensuring fifteen inches in diameter.— About thirteen feet from the ground the two unite and from one perfect tree, fully one hundred feet high.

STA fish dealer in one of the towns of Worchester county ordered a box of haddock from Boston, a few days since, marked C. O. D., whereat he indulged in very strong language, because he had ordered haddock and got codfish.

Hair Vigor,

is nt once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
