It is bad economy, in farming, to run with the crowd in any speculation or speculative crop, as generally there comes a time of pyerse, and then comes the question how to dispose of the telephant." A farmer has a farm well adapted to growing a general variety of crops—wheat, rye, oats, barley corn, potatoes, etc., and he understands in an aging all these crops, when grown in moderall these crops, when grown in moder ate quantities; each of them brings in ate quantities; each of them brings in a specific revenue, and all together finake up a fair profit from the farm. It would be poor economy for such a farmer to concentrate a large majority, or the whole of his forces on any one of these crops or an entirely new one; but how frequent in these days is it the case. But I need not present illustrations But I need not present illustrations here, as almost any one can find them plenty in any section.—But having an "elephant," on hand, how shall we ispose of him to the best advantage?

If corn, wheat or potatoes are grown for sale, it is always afest to sell as soon as ready for market, provided they will bring the cost, or over, of production rather than hold them six months or a year for a better market; for the loss from shrinkage, vermin, decay, storage extra handling and interest will greatly over-balance a greater relative price; and then there is the risk that prices will recede instead of advance, as well as other casualities. But here comes as other casualities. But here comes another objection,—a rush of any one product on the market tends to lower prices, so that great judgment is required in judiciously marketing crops. If there are a variety of products, there is a better chance that some of them will bring a good price when ready for market; while others can be held or otherwise disposed of. Some products, such as are least liable to waste or shrinkage, are frequently better held for a paying are frequently better held for a paying price, as often this is the only way it can be obtained. But again there being no understanding or concert of action. among farmers, often there is little gain

There are some products, such as roots, potatoes, etc., that can be turned to better profit than to be sold or held when ho remunerative price is offered in mar-ket. A much better and more economical way of disposing of them is in feed-ing them to stock. With butter at 30 10, to 75 cents per pound—pork at 10 To 14 cents,—peef 10 to 15, and mutton 6 to or cents,—peer to to 15, and mutton 6 to 7 cents per pound, potatoes, are worth not less than 30 cents per bushel, fed to either kind of stock, especially if cooked, and just a sprinkling of bran or meal be added. If potatoes will not bring over 30cts., it is always better, when corn is $1 or over, per bushel, to cook and feed them, and sell some other product, than a sell at a reduced price. A potato to sell at a reduced price. A potato cooked and fed has a greater value for attening, or milk producing, than is generally conceded to it; a bushel of potatoes with four or six quarts of corn meal, well cooked and fed warm, is of as great if not greater value, fed for the above purposes, than a busnel of raw corn, according to observation and ex perience of the writer.

The converting such heavy perish-able crops into a more concentrated form, provides for more convenient marketing; and there is much less waste from the form, as the manure offil, etc. from the farm, as the manure, offal, etc., is retained to enable us to produce more is retained to enable us to produce more and better crops. In prepairing any and all products of the farm, dairy etc., for market, great care and good calculation is needed in order to have them in good condition for market, and ready when they can be sold to the best advantage; yet all this will avail but little unless we have full and correct informawe have full and correct informs tion, united with good judgment, to decide when that time comes, In order for farmers to be able to determine when to sell, they must know the cost of pro duction, and to this end an exact account-must be kept with each product, and then it will be as easy for them as it is for the merchant to fix a price, with a fair profit for his wares.—Practical Far-

SMOKING HAMS .- I received a new idea from Mr. Looke, says a corespondent-of-the New England-Farmer, in regard to smoking hams. Let the hams gard to smoothly haths. Let the name remain frozen and rapped in papers through the cold weather. In the spring smoke your barrel by burning under it when inverted, a bushel of corn cobs; then rinso the barrel with warm water then rinse the barret with warm water that is to be used in making brine. For 100 its of meat use 10 its of salt, two ounces of saltpetre, with water enough to cover the meat. Scald the brine, skin it and put it with the hams, packed in the smoked barrel. Treated in this way, the hams have the taste of smoked programment with the smoked will be salt programment. ed meat, without smoking, and will keep, like other salt meat, through the WINTERING SHEEP.—Farmers keeping sheep ought to see that their quarters for winter are comfortable. Plenty of room should be provided, for sheep will not do well when crowded into close quarters.—Their pens or sheep should be well ventilated. A covering of straw makes a first rate roofing. The floor should be well littered with straw once in three or four days, and as often floor should be well littered with straw once in three or four days, and as often cleansed. They should be fed regularly.—Hay should be disposed in racks, easily reached while feeding, yet high enough to be clear of any contact with their feet off the ground. They should have oats, or whatever is given beside their hay at reguer hours.—Much advantage is gained by regularity in all matters appertaining to the farm or farmyard. If farmers understand this from and the farmer in a contact of the farmer in the farm or farmyard. If farmers understand this from and the farmer in a contact of the farmer in the farmer i farmyard. If farmers understand this finty us, they would not be fed too highly. More is lost by high feeding than is gained. An old uncle of mine, having had a long experience in sheep raising and keeping used to say that one spoonful of oats a day was sufficient, and that sheep would do well enough on allowance of hay.—Salt should be given at least once a week. least once a week.

Care should be taken in building pens Care should be taken in building pens or sheds; to make an ontrance large enough. Sheep ought not to be crowded in going in and out. Many fine animals have been injured in that way, for sheep go in and out of their quarters when feeding time comes, with a rush and huddle close together. If the entrance is sufficiently large there need be no denger of crawding. All worlds. no danger of crowding. All weakly, scrawny lambs or sheep should be separated from those in good condition, and allowed an extra allowance to catch up. Poor scrawny sheep never stand much chance in a flock of fat thrifty ones as they are knocked around and ones as they are knocked around and seldom get their share of food.

I am glad to see farmers are waking up to their interests, and getting sheep of improved breeds. The oldfashioned long and coarse woolen kinds ought to give place to such as the Southdown, Coiswold or Merino. Not only is the yeild of wool greater but it is of superior quality and brings a much higher price.

IRONSIDES,
FARMER, and others, which he guarantees to give satisfe tion in every respect. His PARLOR AND OFFICE STOVES. are unsurpassed for beauty of design, durability and economy of fuel. He also offers to the pub-lic the justly celebrated EMPLRE GAS BURNER. He would call attention to a few of its merits.

1. It has no brick to be replaced once or twi year. 2. Heating downwards, its rays of heat are effected to the floor, heating the feet instead o he face.

8. The burning of the gas by a second supply of fresh air is complete. The device is not found in other Stoves, consequently the air is always pure.

4. It is a perpetual burner.
5. It makes no klinkers.
6. Is perfectfully clear from dust, the arange-ment is covered by patent and is perfect in its operation.
7. Its ventilotion is complete, and in every respect is a first class Stove and waranted to give satisfaction. Numbers of reforences can be given as to the merits of this stove, but he would ask those who wish to get a desirable stove to call at his shop and see it in operation.

He offers among other Partor, Dming Room, and Chamber 'toves, the "BEACON LIGHT," a beautiful, economical and powerful heating Stove, patented 1869; also PARLOR HEATERS for heating two or more Rooms, Portable Fur-
