such an average increase as the one first named. Taking our Eastern spring pigs they are generally killed from nine to ten monthsold, and the general average is not more than 250 pounds—a growth of less than a pound a day. Our farmers could save a considerable sum harmers could save a considerable sum by a more careful, and generous feeding of their hogs. The general plan is to "keep them along" during the summer with slops, sour milk, etc, waiting until fall before feeding much grain, whereas, meal fed from the day the pig is four weeks old till the day it is killed, all that it will bear and keep healthy, is money welf invested. There can be no question about the matter if corn can be bought for $1.20 a bushel, and pork brings 12c, a pound.

Pollen For Bees.—Give all bees flour for pollen as soon as they begin to fly in the spring; it is as essential for them to have it as honey. They will live on it and water for weeks, if the weather is so they can fly out every few days, if they have no water. Pollen and water constitute the chief food the one on eats when she is laving eggs. A queen cats when she is laying eggs. A queen in a well stocked hive, as to noney and bees, would lay but lew, if any, eggs if she did not have pollen. Hence, eggs if she did not have pollen. Hence, the necessity to supply the bees with it in early spring, before they can gather it from natural sources. As soon as bees begin to gather it, they feed their queens on a certain lood, which is constituted chiefly of pollen and water. Bees do not feed their queens unless they are laying, or they wish them to. They then tend her regularly, and offer her lood every few minutes. At other times the queen helps herself to food as any other bees. Hence the necessity of furnishing them with a substitute for any other bees. Hence the accessity of furnishing them with a substitute for pollen so as to have them strong and populous early. For herein lies the secret of bee keeping. Take oats, tye or barley, (either will do); get it ground line—it need not be bolted; feed in tassets, as they are bondy to set out or kets, as they are handy to set out or take in at night, or if it should storm; they should be set in a warm, sheltered place, out of the wind. To get the bees to find it reasily, drop a few drops of "oil of aniso" near the basket and it will attract them to it.

THE BEST TIME TO SOW CLOVER.—
A correspondent of one of our exchanges writes: During the eighteen years I have kept up the practice of sowing cloverseed in April, and never lost a crop. I have sown from fifteen to fifty acres per year. I sow in as dry a time as I can get, and when the ground is as much cracked as possible. The seeds
