Now it is evident to any thinking mind, if this be so, and any one of these elements be lacking, teeble results follow; for instance, take a large, big-boned man, whose bone structures seem almost giantlike, and which depend mainly on lime for their structure, and if such a man he delicient in iron he is also very much delicient in strength. Though his bones be sufficiently large to constitute a giant, yet how often have we seen his heels thrown into the air by the quick movement of a strong closely-built, small man; whose whole-system-was-fully developed. This is indeed an important discovery for an intelligent farmer in quest of a farm. He at once corresponds with the owner out West, and finally buys it at a cost of a small fraction above the taxes on it. We ask him why he was such a simpleton as to purchase an old, worn-out farm when he could have bought one in its virgin state? He invites us into his laboratory, and there answers the question by taking one pound of solid and one of liquid exerement from animals, and them apart, and proves, at least to our satisfaction, that there is about four times more salt and potash in the liquid with the sale of DOMESTICS. It is not the crop which grows that exhausts the land; it is the disposition we make of it after it is grown. Every bushel of grain contains matters supplied by the soil. If it is sold there is an end of it, so far as the farm is concerned. If it is fed out on the place, nearly the whole of the part taken from the foil goes into the dung heap, and there goes with it matter which the growing plant took directly or indirectly from the atmosphere, and which helps to develop more of the mineral plant-food of the soil, and to make more than a bushel the next year. Therefore, look well to the crops: Sell of course, all that cannot profitably be fed out on the place, and, with a part of the price, buy manure to bring home. But, in counting the profit and loss of feeding at home, consider, the value of the manure. It is safe to say, that, one year with another, corn thoroughly soaked and cooked, (never mind the grinding if you cook thoroughly) and fed to well-housed swine of a 'growthy' breed, will bring more money than if sold in the market, to say nothing of the manure; indeed, it will more often WOOLEN GOODS. in Carlisle, for Men's, Youths', and Boy's we CLEAN, FAT AND JUICY.
