WHEAT CULTURE.

Among farmers in this country, as well as in Europe, the question as to the proper amount of seed to be used in the cultivation of grain has of late received considerable attention. We have long been convinced that in raising wheat too much seed to the acre is used—and have said that wheat should be planted—not sowed. If this is done at the proper time, winter wheat may be planted—not sowed. If this is done at the proper time, winter wheat may be raised with as much certainty, as spring wheat; indeed, we think with more certainty, and every one knows that winter wheat, when it succeeds, yields a larger crop and of better quality. Let it be planted as early as it can be without danger of the seed stalk starting before the frost, and the plant will become well rooted and unless the water stands upon the surface it will not sufferent much will be surface it will not sufferent from the winter.

We are inclined to believe that wheat put into the ground from two to four inches deep, in rows sixteen or eighteen menes deep, in rows sixteen or eignteen inches apart, with the grains not less than six inches apart in the row would yield, with proper cultivation afterward, double the number of bushels yield, with proper cultivation afterward, double the number of bushels usually obtained per acre.

Why should wheat unlike other cops deteriorate both in quality and weight, it is well-known that it does? Corn is not only kept up to its full standard, but constantly improved by selecting the best grains for seed, and giving ita clean culture and allowing each plant sufficient space in which to spread its roots and find nourishment. New corn sown broadcast and so thek that it would shade the ground and thus keep down the growth of weeds, and the corn taken for seed from the average products of the field how long before it would depreciate as much as the wheat crop has done?

The idea that wheat must grow so thick as to shade the ground in the spring, and thus favor the catch of grass seed which we usually sow with it; or so thick as to smother the weeds in the rich but poorly cultivated soils of the west, is we believe all wrong.—We ask why grass seed should be sown at all with wheat? It can be sown to better advantage after the wheat is baryested. If the wheat has been prop-better advantage after the wheat is harvested, if the wheat has been properly cultivated. The wheat needs the whole strength of the soil while it is growing—as much asdoes the corn, and the weeds should be kept down by cul-tivation in the wheat field as well in the corn field. the corn field.

'The editor of the "Prairie Farmer" is discoursing upon this subject makes some very sensible remarks, which we would commend to the consideration of Eastern as well as Western wheat growers. He says:

"If wheat is sown thick enough to keep weeds down it is sown thick enough to keep down a large number of spires that would grow and produce seeds, "some a hundred fold, some sixty fold and some thirty fold," if there was room enough to develon.

old and some thirty lold, It there was room enough to develop.

"How many of our farmers are aware how near together the grains of wheat lie when they sow two bushels of wheat to the aere? And yet some sow heavier than that. One peck to the aere will put four grains on every square foot of the land, and it is highly brokely better the agreement than wall. square foot of the land, and it is nighly probable that these are more than would grow to the best advantage. The truth is that very few of us have ever seen the product of a single grain of wheat that was growing to the best advantage in regard to space and cultivation.—One grain of wheat in soil free from words and least are they are well as the weeds, and kept mellow, as we do the soil around some vegetables, would show a product as different from what we see in an ordinary broadcast wheat field as the solitary mountain oak diff-ers from the puny sapling in the shady

"When the time coures that we plant, hoe and cultivate wheat, a part of the extra expense of tending it will be defrayed by the saving of seed, from the difference of the two bushels or more which many now use, and the peck that will be spread over the same ground." -New England Farmer

FAULTS IN BUILDING.

Among the most prominent we may enumerate these faults in planning and 1. Cramping a house down to the smallest possible space, so as to make more yard-room, which will never be

2. Making no calculation as to the size of rooms or the location of furniture.

3. Building chimneys byguess so that one has to have a dozen lengths of useless stove upe, or else place his stove in the most inconvenient location. 1. Arranging windows and doors so that one opens against the other, or in the very spot to be occupied by a piece of furniture, or so placing them that no fresh air can get through the house, even though the whole should be open.

5. Providing no means of ventilating windows, hence 5. Providing no means of ventrating rooms save by doors or windows, hence all the impure air which is generated by breathing, cooking, fermentation as it is rarified, rises to the top of the room, and there remains to breed discentifort, disease and death.

6. Nailing sheeting to the outside of the studying and chaptered; for siding the studding and clapboards (or siding) close to the outside of that, leaving small or no air holes between them; small or no air holes between them; and as in nine cases out of ten, green materials for each covering have been used they shrink and rot seen making a honey-comb of the shell, though plastered with paint and cement.

7. Laying the floor directly upon joist, or at best, laying it with cults full of knots and shakes which are but little better than nothing, and as a consequence, the floor is always cold and uncomfortable.

8. In finishing, first lay the basis pilasters and easing (perhans of orem asters and casing (perhaps of green lumber), and then lathing and plaster-ing up to them so that when they dry large orifices are left to let in cold and moisture, 9. Letting the work out, as a whole, trusting to the honesty of the contractor to do it, without having plans and specifications properly drawn, and without having any one to oversee, or criticise or direct it.

WINTER BREAKFASTS.—During the summer months, when the heat is great and sleep unrefreshing, it matters not much, to the majority of people, what is put on the breakfast table, as there is generally a disposition to eat but little, and no particular regard paid to what that little is, but with the return of cold weather, breakfasts rise to importance. Sound sleep and the grisp fresh eir of the morning, create an appetite which will not be put off with a cup of tea and a piece of toast. Then, by a kindly dispensation of Providence comes the rich brown sausage and it, unfailing companion, the delicious buckwheat cake. With these smoking hot upon the board, the man who cannot bless his luck and enjoy himself, has either got a bad stomach, a troubled conscience, or is mightily hard to please. There is nothing like this breakfast, if the materials be good and properly served. Both should be hot, the sausage fried to a rich dark brown, and the cake to that shade of the same color which only a good cook can attain. Our hill farmers furnish the kind of flour for cakes, and Bradford county farmers raise just the sort of pigs for sausage. After such a meal, with good coffee, one can sink back satisfied in one's chair and think with sidney smith:

Bidney Smith: "Screnely full the epicure may say, "Pate cannot harm me, I have dired to-day."

or farmers to read and study. With no vexations cares to annoy them, they can devote their nights to useful study, and laugh at the perplexities of less favored mortals.
