Among old farmers, as well as all other old people, there is a feeling of being to old to learn. Some object to reading papers and books or improved modes of agriculture; they refuse to try experiments in new things or old because forsooth they are too old to learn; they give no thought to the best light of the age, to improvements in crops, stock, implements, because they fancy they are too old to learn; they seem to think it is a task to learn after one has seen the sun of life at its zenith. Now all this sea-saw about being too old to learn is mere twaddle. While the lamp holds out to burn one should always strive to learn. Learning should be the business of life, and nowhere more so than among farmers. Some old men have had right views of living and learning; Socrates when very old learned to play on musical instruments; Cato at eighty learned the Greek language; Plutarch when nearly eighty commenced the study of Latin; Boccaccio at thirty-five commenced the study of polite literature; Sir Henry. Speiman commenced the study of the sciences when nearly sixty; Ludovico at 115 wrote the memories of his own time; Ogilby, the translator of Homer and Virgil, was unacquainted with Latin and Greek till he was wast fifty; Franklin did not commenc his philosophical pursuits till he was about fifty; Accorso, an eminent lay rev, being asked why he began the study of law so late, answered that inde he began it late, but therefore, he she ald master it sooner; Dryden at nea seventy commenced the translation the Iliad and his most pleasing productions were written in his old age; Milton wrote his grandest works when quite old, and our own Benton acquired his literary fame after spending thirty years in Congress, and just on the eve of his election to the great congress above. History is full of such instances, and the impression everywhere prevails that what is learned must be learned while we are young. This is a mistake, live and learn should be the motto of every one and most especially so in this learning age. Fathers and mothers should set examples of learning to their children. We write especially now for farmers; they have need to live and learn, and in order to learn while they live, they should secure and read the best papers and books on their profession. Agriculture is becoming a science as well as an art; it is knowledge as well as labor; it requires mind as well as muscle, to prosecute it. The farmer in times to come is to be the genuine of intelligent labor, by which the fields are to wave their golden harvest, and human life be adorned and honored.

FEEDING A VARIETY OF FODDER, Most farmers need line upon line, precept upon precept, in regard to the care required for their domestic animals during the foddering season. Many persist in adhering to the old practice of feeding only one kiud of fodder for a given period, and then changing to another kind for a few weeks. No practice can be attended with more unsatisfactory results than this. Sheep, for example, are frequently confined to a little straw and grain daily. Then, for a few weeks, hay is substituted and the grain omitted. Sheep are exceedingly fond of a variety of food. Therefore a far better practice would be to feed a all quantity of food every-day, and not quite as much grain, letting the stock have free access to good straw, day and night. All kinds of domestic ansmals should thrive far more satisfactorily when only one kind is dealt out without change. Even hore s become excessively tired of cnt fee at every it will always be better to vary the feed so as to afford the animal any advantage that may arise from feeding a variety of hay, straw, corn. ks, meal or roots. Another considuation of nolittle imporance is the quantity of cut feed an animal requis. There is such a thing as compel. g a horse, for example, to eat much a ore straw than he really needs, who at hard work. A team requires grain or meal. Straw will not furnish much nourishment. It is better to give a horse not more than a peck of cut straw with the meal, than to mingle the same quantity of meal with a half bushel of strew .-Too much bulk is just as objectionable as too little. This fact will hold good in feeding any kind of stock. Feeding too much straw with a little meal is like compelling a person to eat a quart of soup, when, if the nourishment were contained in a pint dish, it would be much more palatable.—N. Y. Observer.

OILING AXLES.-Much is lost for want of attention to wagon axles .-They should be examined about once a week, if in constant use, and properly oiled. Lard is not suitable, for it penetrates through the hub and loosens the spokes. We know of nothing better than castor oil, and a rancid article, which can be had at cheap rates at the apothecary's, is just as good for this purpose as the best. A small quantity, applied upon the bearings of the axle, is just as good as to oil the whole surface. If the oiling is neglected, there is much friction, which has to be overcome by the increased exertion of the team. The boxes and axles both wear away more rapidly and there is soon need of a new wheel and axle. A good wheel-jack will greatly facilitate the oiling process. With this implement one man can oil the wheels of an ox-wagon as rapidly as two without it.—American Agriculturist.

MICE.—See that all rubbish is removed from around the trunks of trees, for where there is any chance for mice to harbor they are sure to injure the trees by gnawing away the bark .-Tramp down the light snows around the trees.

Some one with spare time on his hands has been investigating a bushel Henry 7. Helmbo'd's Genuine Prepa of wheat, and reports that it contains 666,000 grains.

Our stock is so full and complete that it is impossible to enumerate all, we therefore cordially invite all to come and examine, as we take great pleasure in showing our goods.
Having purchased our goods for Cash, we con seil them much cheaper than can be bougior elsewhere, and we feel confident from the lome experience in the business; and our superior good taste and judgment in selecting handsome goods, that we cannot fail to please.
Do not fail to come and secure good bargains at the old stand, on South Hanover Street.
