MANAGEMENT OF DUCKS .- This species of poultry is not kept in such numbers here as they are in Europe, and they are not appreciated at the particular season when everybody looks for them there. In England young ducks are in general request as soon as green peas can be had, for ducks and green peas are as much thought of in June as "house lamb" at Easter and fat geese at Michaelmas, or these or turkey at Thanksgiving here. Ducks are hatched out very early by some, to sell by the time the gentlemen's gardeners have green peas, which they manage to have in the last week in May, by planting them in long trough-like hoves in the hot houses and then taking them out as warm weather comes on. Ducks lay a great many eggs when well ted and the place is well adapted for them, and ducks and geese will be seen at every good farm homestead, but there is no such thing as picking the feathers in any instance till the poor things are dead, excepting in one or two isolated places where the inhabitants are of a very low description though it is pretty general in Ireland and is practiced to some extent in

Ducks are profitable, for although the young ones while growing eat a great deal more than chickens, they grow as fast again, and when they are full grown they will not eat half as much as chickens, and where there is running water and ponds they cost scarcely anything to keep. Where the winters are mild they will commence laying by New-Year's day if well fed, and the young ones which were hatched the previous April will begin in December and lay regularly every day if given a small quantity of meat once a day when it is too dry or too cold for them to find worms or grubs of any kind. When it is showery without frost they will not require flesh of any kind to be given them.—Ib.

STARCHING AND IRONING .- A few weeks since a lady gave very good directions for starching and ironing shirt. bosoms, which did not go far enough for those who wished the extra high polish that we all admire so much in store windows, &c. I go through the process just as she directed, and when the articles are thoroughly dry, place one thickness of cloth over it, sewed tightly; have the "polishing iron' heated so that it will not scorch, and rub it quick and hard over the surface, up and down the bosom, using only the rounded part on the front of the iron. A still more high polish may be obtained by passing a damp cloth lightly over the smooth surface, and then rubbing hard and quickly with the hot iron. I think it needs a good deal of patient practice to do this admirably, but I know it is crowned with success, and when one learned, is as easy as other ironing. A "polishing iron" is small and highly polished, with a rounded part which allows all the friction to come on a small part at one time, which develops the glosss that may be in both each ; one is sufficient for a family.—Ib
