SOLDIERS' SCHOOL AT CARLISLE BAR BACKS.-In the House of Representa ives, on the 6th inst., the Hon, R. J. The Harrisburg Patriot has an unpleasant habit of hunting up the record of well-known legislative "roosters" and "pinchers," and mone of its recent incursions upon the realm frequented by this class of bipeds, it has unearthed a leaf from the history of the "ring and rowdy" candidate for Auditor General. It is as follows: "Among the habitures of the lobby of the capitol there are measures of a cer-"Among the habitues of the lobby of the capitol there are measures of a certain class which are known as 'pinchers,' Whenever a member introduces a resolution to investigate the affairs of a corporation, or a bill to compel a railroad company to fence up their track, his proposition is described as a "pincher" by those who are familiar with the tricks of the lobby. Scarcely a session passes that does not witness the introduction of a number of these jobs. Soon after Harrlson Allen's appearance in the House in 1866, he read in place a bill tocompel the Philadelphiaan d Erie railroad company to fence their road in the county of Warren. Those who are familiar with the nature of the territory in Warren county through which the railroad passes will appreciate this proposition.

The passage of the bill would have inflicted a heavy burden on the treasury of the company without conferring any corresponding benefit on the public. Railroads could not be constructed throw wild and sparsely settled regions if this expense were entailed on the projectors. Allen's bill was sent to the committee on railroads and there it slept quietly until the close of the session. But he had accomplished no doubt all be intended.—He had introduced a measure which was well calculated to excite the alarm of the company, and to compel them to take immediate steps for its suppression. It is the capitol there are measures of a cer company, and to compel them to take immediate steps for its suppression. It is now proposed to make a legislative "pincher" auditor general of the comon wealth.
