Agricultural.

[From the American Agriculturist]

Husking and Cribbing Corn.

"The way we husk," writes one of our Illinois correspondents, "is to grasp the ear with the left hand, stripping one side with the right hand, then grasping the ear with the right hand and strip with the left, and break in a sort of a combined movement, tossing into the wagon with the right hand.—Sometimes a husk or silk adheres, but we let it go, for while you are taking it off you can husk another ear. It makes one third difference in the work, and no perceptible difference in the value of the corn to horses, cattle, sheep, or hogs, or to the buyers. Husk from the shock, and throw directly into the wagon. It saves much labor. To prevent the corn from being thrown over the wagon, take a wide board as long as the box, nail strips on both sides, a few inches longer than the board is wide.—Then place the board on top of one side of the wagon. The strips will hold it in place, making that side of the wagon higher than the other, and enabling the husker to toss in the corn without looking. If the corn must be sorted, throw the poor corn on the ground.

"To facilitate unloading, take a board, fifteen inches wide, three and a half feet long; nail a cleat across it on one end, and an inch from it nail another. Place this end on the tail-board of the box, and let the other end lie on the bottom of the box. This will enable one to use a scoop shovel at once without the tediousness of handpicking."—This latter plan was described in the American Agriculturist several years ago, and we have found it ourselves a great saving of time and labor. We do not husk into the wagon. If only one man was husking at a shock, it would not pay in our case to let a team stand idle. We would rather hire the corn husked by the bushel and set the team to fall plowing. But many of the writer's suggestions are good.

SHEEP-KILLING DOGS.—"I would like to keep sheep on my hilly farm," writes a correspondent, "but am afraid of the dogs. Is there any remedy?"—There are three remedies: 1. If there is a tax on dogs in your State, see that it is enforced in your neighborhood. 2. If there is no dog law in the State, vote for no man who will not pledge himself to do all he can to have one enacted. 3. Let all the sheep men in the neighborhood form themselves into an association. Let nothing be done to gratify personal spite; but if a suspicious dog is found prowling about the farm, shoot him. Then, if the owner can prove damages, let the association pay them, and repeat the process. City and village dogs must be taught to stay at home. They are often abused and half-starved, and it would be a mercy to them to give them one good meal of mutton with a liberal allowance of strychnine in it. The neighbors might be told that this feast was provided solely for visitors, so that they can keep their dogs at home.

A good plan to adopt is, when a sheep dies, dress it and wash it with water containing a few table-spoonfuls of crude carbolic acid. It will preserve the meat for months. Cut it up into joints and hang it up, and you will always have a piece of mutton on hand for a hungry dog that may visit you from the city or village or swamp. If this work is done systematically and constantly, it will have a wholesome effect. It is rarely that a well-bred and well-fed dog attacks sheep, and it is not often that such dogs wander far from home at night. If there are any good dogs in the neigborhood, inform the owners of the fact that you have set a trap for the half-starved prowlers from the city, and that they had better fasten theirs up at night. In this way no harm is likely to be done.

How Milk Gets Spoiled.

Mr. Willard, in his Ohio address, gives much weight to certain causes which effect a deterioration in the quality of milk—especially the presence or dirt and dust in the pail; the inhalation of foul odors by the cows at pasture and elsewhere; and the drinking of putrid water.

Instanses are cited, in which putrifying flesh (as of dead animals) has communicated a taint to the milk in the bag, by simply tainting the air breathed by the cow. Milk in the vat of a cheese factory during the heating of the curds gave off a smell like that of stagnant water. It was found that one of the patrons had allowed his cows to pass through a narrow slough, the mud of which adhered to their udders. Particles of dust thus got into the pail at milking, and thus introduced fungi from the slough, which multiplied in the milk, and spoiled the whole of it—giving it the odor of foul water.

Prof. Law, of Cornell University, finding the cream on his milk to be ropy, examined it with a microscope, and found it infested with living organisms. On investigation he found that the herd from which his supply came drank the water of "a stagnant pool, located in a muddy swale." The microscope developed organisms in this water of the same sort with those found in the milk. The same were also detected on a microscopic examination of the blood of the cows. That the cows were in a diseased condition was shown by the thermometer test—they being hot and feverish. A little of the same filthy water was introduced into milk which proper tests had shown to be pure, and in due time "the same filthy organisms multiplied and took possession of it in vast numbers, producing the same character of milk as that first noticed."

This investigation, made by a careful observer, proved conclusively that the germs of disease and of a milk-spoiling ferment can be introduced into the blood and into the udder, by simply allowing the cow to drink unsuitable water. It holds out the plainest possible practical lesson to the dairyman, and if he disregards it, and so misses his opportunity for making good cheese and butter, he has only himself to thank. It shows that the cleanliness of a dairy farm must be radical, thorough, and all-pervading. No filthy mud should be allowed to dry into a dust that may foul the pail; no foul odors should taint the undrawn milk; and the drinking water should be free of the "little leaven that leaveneth the whole lump"—cow, milk, and all.

HARDWARE

AND CUTLERY.

MILLER & BOWERS

take this opportunity of directing the attention of the community at large, and every person in particular, to their recently replenished stock of

HARDWARE,

They studiously avoided investing during the high prices, and patiently waited the falling out of the bottom before attempting to refill their shelves, and now that things have been reduced to old time prices, as near as possible, they have invested largely and are prepared to guarantee to their friends and customers as low prices as any market outside the cities. They especially invite the attention of mechanics, farmers and builders. Our stock is complete and none need fear meeting with disappointment in enquiring for anything in our line.

We have the agency of the Willcox & Gibbs and would respectfully ask all those in want of a Machine, to examine the Willcox & Gibbs before purchasing.

All orders promptly attended to, and goods delivered to all parts of the town free of charge.
