But, until to-day, no philosopher has chosen to assume the difficult and delicate task. No jurisprudent has dared to investigate a charge that has been a sort of moral stronghold for ages. So grand a thing is it to be able to point away, far back, deeper and deeper into antiquity, to the very First Families, and say, Behold the fountain-head of our murder record ! Doggerel has much to answer for. It has driven many a monstrous wrong into the heart of its century. It has done its worst with Cain, but not the worst.

Are hereditary organism, temperamental excitability, emotional phrensy not to be considered? No, a thousand times NO! What 'competent juror'' would acquiesce in such a proposition !

Friends, the time has come when this case must be taken up. Its mighty issue cannot be set aside. If Cain was not sane at the moment of the killing, the stain of murder must be wiped from his brow now and forever. This tardy justice may at least be done him. Our children and our children's children must be taught to speak of Cain, the manslaughterer; Cain the mentally-excitable; Cain the peculiarly-circumstanced. But Cain the murderer? Never!

He is about thirty-five years old, and is regarded as the bravest Indian in the tribe. But enough has

It is really one of the most remarkable freaks of nature in the country, and if it had not been for the mortars and howitlers the loss on ourside would have been very heavy. The officers of the command were much astoniahed at the ingenuity of the Mo-does in their artificial work on these nat-ural fortifications. At one spot thep com-structed a winding gallery up a rocky bluff, which was guarded by a side wall of broken rocks, so placed as to render it impregnable to musketry from any point. Every prominent rock that commanded an approach was fortified with breast-works of loose rock, behind which they could shoot with their guns at rest and perfect security from the fire of the at-tacking party.
