Yet we have not the least doubt but the time is not very far distantively not a sour intermitten faitered as a mable to treatment a cour intermitten favers, or any other disease which yields to the power of the healing art."

Dr. J. Turnbull, Physician of the Liverpool Infirmary, 1932: "I am satisfied that there is more evidence than is generally supposed in favor of the curability of consumption." He remarks that when patents sees over micr presenting all the usual symptoms, sits too common for medical men to distrust their deagnosts, and to take the fact of their recovery as a proof that the disease could not have been Palmonary Consumption. Against this mode of reasoning he protests. See Braithwaith Retrospect, July, 1950, page 123.

197. Joseph Parrish, a much esteemed physician of Philadelphia, was attacked, when young, with all the premonitory symptoms of consumption; he became cured, and lived to an advanced age. At a postmorten examination, there were found, as he had predated, exavites in his lungs which had become cireaticed, exavites in his lungs which had become cireaticed.

"Dr. Maddock's book on inhalations is one of the few which have been issued from the English press on this subject. Its re-publication in this country, with the judeious notes of Dr. Greene, will add to the medical literature of the United States, and, it is hoped, excite some interest in the medical profession on the subject of inhalation as a means of treating pulmonary affections. With the addition of modern discoveries in physiology, this mode of treating these diseases should have a cartrial, and some atomement made for the long neglect which inhalation has suffered at the hands of medical mean.

"The late Dr. Morton, to our own presonal knowledge, used the vapor of iodine quite commonly in cases of bronchities, a disease to which he was himself very liable.

"JAMES BRYAN, A. M., M. D.,
"Prof of Surg in Philm, Col. of Medicine;
"Editor of Philada. Med. and Surg. Journal."
"Dr. Cotterena, of Paris, has communicated, in the Journal Heidomaduire, and the 'Arch. Gen. de Medecine.' for 1830, several highly important cases of pulmonary consumption, in whick perfect recovery ensued from the use of inhabitions. Mr. John Murray, in a most interesting and able work on pulmonary consumption, has also martrated numerous cases of pulmonic disease which had been cared in the same manner. Dr. Elliottson, in the London "Lancet," No. 402, observes, in his admirable lectures, that he has seen many cases of tuberculous consumption and disease expected in the same manner, and the second of the surplessed of tuberculous consumption and disease of the distance of the distance of the distance of the distance of the distances, and the distance of the dista

"Baron Van Swieten, in his learned arnotations on Boerhauve, remarks, in the article 'Consumption.' It is certain that steams and vapore drawn in with the air in respiration may be of use. as they everywhere come in contact with the whole erial cavity of the funge; and thus remedies may be applied according to the various conditions of the disease.'

"The RATIONALE of inhalation is exceedingly simple—indeed, nothing can be more simple; and it will be at once evident to any person who will give the matter one minute's consideration, that this plan of fresiment is based upon strictly scientific and correct principles—for it requires no professional learning to perceive that from the relative position of the stomach and the lungs, remedies must necessarily be more effective in diseases of the lungs, when introduced into the whole ternal cavity and to the alsorbing surfaces of those organs, than when exhibited through the stomach, where they must undergo great and anknown changes, from the process of digestion, & c., and can only neach the seat of disease by noness of the circulation.

changes, from the problems by means of the circulation.

We add to the testimony already given, that of Dr. Rush, of Philadelphia, who in his work on "Disease's of the Chest," speaking of INHALATION, remarks that "TOO NEUR CANNOT be and in favor of this simple system of conveying remedies. I have frequently seen, patients anatched from the jaws of death by it. It is to be shoped that the general want of success which attends the present mode of treating palmonic diseases, will induce medical men to give a fair and tult trial to a remedial measure which appears so well calculated to effect a great amount of good."

Dr. J. Bennett, in his walked work on Consumption, gives his opinion that "vapor is the most reasonable."

senetice, as aforesail, the above happy result was obtained.

The following is also another strong proof of the efficacy of Medicated Inhalation in the treatment of Pulmonary diseases, co joined with suitable adjuncts.

Mr. V. II. aged forty-two, a manufacturer, Inseen affected a number of years with Bronchitts, his right lung; also involved, hacknoptyers (bleeding of the lung). In ving occured several times to some extent. He has also been under varied medical treatment and advice, without much heneft for some years past, and heen unable to leave his room during the full and winter months. Adopting Medicated Inshalation, he found immediate relief; and during the winter and fall of 185. also this winter, he has been enabled to attend to his regular business. It speaks of the advantages thus derived as far beyond his expectations. This case came under the immediate nonce of the following gentlemen, to whom we would respectfully refer:

The Proprietor states, without fear of contradiction, that Paschall's Pever and Ague Mixture has effectionally cured more persons where it has been introduced than any other preparation now in use, to say more is unaccessary, as the medicine is to stand or fail upon its own meris.

E. S. Moarts—Dear Sic—I write to inform you that your 'Paschall's Fever and Agne Mixture,' hat certainly proved 'an effectual cure,' for this direase as well as other Bilious complaints generally known as Chills and Fever. Intermittent and Reinitent Fever, &c., &c., and am glad that such a medicine has at last been introduced among us. I was much astonished upon learning from your agents here of the large quantity sold this fall; and in every case. except one, in had entirely cured the patient upon taking one cotte only, and some not that much. From what I can learn, I have modoubt that, as a precentive for these diseases, it would be an effectual as incuring. Where it once has been tried and taken according to directions, the question will never aise—what wil care the Chills and Fever? Although I have not been under the necessity of taking any of the Mixture; yet a number of persons, known to me, have been cured by it, and whose names I am at liberty to communicate to dury persons interested.
