Doctor Mordecai Mellows complains that we have done him a great wrong:-First, by "taking away his good name," and substituting therefor that of "Meudows," in "took toll" of the Widow Lambkin; and secondly, by insinuating that the Widow L. as his own autobiography, as originally published in the St. Louis Reveille. From this we give the true denouement of the affair between the Doctor and the Widow;

A few evenings after the memorable sleigh-ride, they were sitting side by side in the Widow's snug parlor. They had discussed neighborhood affairs, flowers, mooned to be thinking aloud:

"Mellows is such a pretty name!-Oh, my I almost said something, didn't I?"

"Yes," replied the Doctor, "I think it is prettier than some other names."

At parting the Widow murmured, "We have enemies here. We have, indeed."

"Ah, is it possible?' rejoined the Doctor, who thought that the "We" sounded very prettily; but still the name of Lambkin was

The next day the Widow was summoned to attend a sick relative ,who resided near her own residence, which was at Littleton. The Doctor was at the door to bid her good-

"You may; as we sha'n't see each other for a long while," she whispered.

"May what?" "Take a little toll at parting."

"And be sure," she added, after toll was taken enough for a long bridge with a great many arches, "be sure to address your letters to North Littleton. They may be intercepted if sont to Littleton merely."

Render, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this may the vicinity of Boston. I know the effect of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I sever sold a bottle of it but that I sold another; after a trial it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising; first that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite pieniful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846—second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it and sold about six bottles per day of it.
