The Relief of Lucknow. Oh! that last day in Lucknow fort! We knew that it was the last, That the enemy's lines crept surely on And the end was coming fast. To yield to that foe was worse than death. An the men and all worked on; It was one more day of smoke and roar,

And then it would all be done. There was one of us, a corporal's wife, A fair young gentle thing, Wasted with fever in the siege, And her mind was wandering. She lay on the ground in her Scottish plaid, And I took her hend on my knee: "When my father comes hame frac the plough," she said

"Oh! then please wauken me " She slept like a child on her father's floor, In the flecking of woodbine shade, When the house-dog sprawls by the open door, And the mother's wheel is staid. It was smoke and roar and powder-steach,

And hopeless waiting for death; And the soldier's wife, like a full-tired child, Seemed scarce to draw her breath sank to sleep; and I had my dream Of an English village-lane, and wall and garden,-but one wild scream Brought me back to the roar again There Jessie Brown stood listening $3 00 Till a sudden gladuess broke 5 00 7 00 All over her face, and she caught my hand And drew me near, as she spoke. 8 00 3 00 "The Hiclanders' oh' dinna ye hear

The slogan far awa? The M'Gregor's? oh! I ken it weel; 10 00 It's the grandest o' them a'! "God bless that bonny Hielanders!

We're saved' we're saved." she cried; And fell on her knees, and thanks to God Flowed forth like a full flood-tide. Along the battery-line her cry Had fallen among the men, and they started back;--they were there to die; But was life so near them, then?

They listened for life; the rattling fire Far off. and the far off roar, Were all: and the colonel shook his head, And they turned to their guns once more But Jessie said, "the slogan's done; But winna ye hear it noo, The Campbells are comin'? It's not a dream; Our succors hae broken through!"

We heard the roar and the rattle afar, But the pipes we could not hear; So the men plied their work of hopeless war, And knew that the end was year. It was not long ere it made its way,-

A shrilling, ceaseless sound: was no noise from the strife afar, Or the support under ground. It was the pipes of the Highlanders! And now they played Audd Lang Syne;

It came to our men like the voice of God, And they shouted along the line. And they wept and shook one another's hands And the women sobbed in a crowd; And every one kuch down where he stood,

And we all thanked God aloud. That happy time, when we welcomed them. Our men put Jessie first; and the general gave her his hand, and cheers Like a storm from the soldiers burst.

And the pipers' ribbons and tartans streamed Marching round and round our line, and our toyful cheers were broken with tears As the pipes played Auld Lang Syne [Atlantic Monthly.

The social code must have been a little relaxed when such exalted personages were esteemed for such questionable accomplishment. It was the general's habit to lay down a single rouleau covered up in paper, and bearing the usual outward aspect of a rouleau containing one thousand francs. If it was his fate to lose, the general invariably withdrew his rouleau and handed the croupler instead a note for one thousand franes. But, when his turn came to win, and he was persented with a thousand francs, 'Pardon me,' said he, putting it back gently, 'my stake was considerably more.' The rouleau was then opened,
