so often that I had almost ceased to believe in wolves of this description at all. Unused to personal combat, and embarrassed by the novel circumstances under which I found myself, I was standing undecided on the landing, when I caught that well-known whisper of "Henry, Henry," from the upper story. They desisted from their occupation of examining the articles of vertu upon the chimney-piece, while their fiendish countenances relaxed into a bideous grin. One of Them style cautiously towards the door where Oil. I was standing. I heard his burglarious feet, I heard the "Henry, Henry!" still going on from above stairs; I heard my own heart nit-a-pat, pit-a-pat within me. It was one of those moments in which one lives a life. The head of the craped marauder was projected cautiously round the door, as if to listen. I poised my weapon, and brought it down with unerring aim upon his skull .--He fell like a bullock beneath the axe; and I sped up to my bed-chamber with all the noiselessness and celerity of a bird. It was I who locked the door this time, and piled the wash-hand-stand, two bandboxes, and a chair against it, with the speed of lightning. Was Mrs. B. out of her mind with terror that at such an hour as that she should indulge in a paroxysm of mirth?

"Good heavens!" I cried, "be calm, my love; there are burglars in the house at last." "My dear Henry," she answered, laughing so that the tears quite stood in her eyes, "I am very surry; I tried to call you back. But when I sent you down stairs, I quite forgot that this was the morning upon which I had ordered the sweeps!"

One of these gentlemen was at that moment lying underneath with his skull fractured, and it cost me fifteen pounds to get it mended, besides the expense of a new drawing-room carpet.
