said he. "and I have had most delightful conversations with her, of which you were the subject?"

"I!" I exclaimed, in unfaigned astonishment.

"Yes, you," he replied pressing the hand of which he had somehow contrived to posseas himself. "I loved you," he continued, "the first time I saw you, for your resemblance to one who has been to me more than a mother, and through your little cousin I have become better acquainted with you than you imagine. All that she told me confirmed my first impression, and the discovery of your 'masquerading folly,' to use your own words, had filled me with the deepest gratitude. But you have not answered my question?" What followed is of no consequence to any one but myself, suffice it so sny that in proper time my uncleand cousins were duly informed; but they perversely refused to be astonished. They all declared that they had a presentiment of this from the beginring, and Uncle Althorpe mischievously nsked if he had not prophesied that I would "do?"

When Mr. Denmore followed me home to he inspected by those morenear and dear to me, he passed the ordeal with credit, and no very long time clapsed ere I was installed mistress of the old mansion.

Strange to relate, none of the five beautiful cousins have ever married while I have gained a prize which I believe any one of them would willingly have appropriated. I do not regret my masquerade, and I have become reconciled to my nose, for I believe that had it been at all different I should never have found my husband.

JERROLD'S WIT .- "Douglas Jerrold's Wit," just published in a neat volume by Ticknor * Fields, improves upon every fresh reading. shough there is considerable in it which is n is wiser or wittire than other people have written. Some of his illustrations are excollect. Take this, for instance, and we need not go to a cabinet minister to find specimens of the hear.

"It occasionally happens that a bear affoat on an iceberg drifts into a warmer latitude then the latitude of eternal frost, and as the iceberg melts and melts under the increasing heat, the bear shifts, finding his footing passing from beneath him, and at length howls pitcously, to know the dissolution of she iceberg must in time occur. We would not compare a minister of State to a polar bear, nevertheless, even a chuncellor of the exchequtr, as he finds Parliament melting and a dissolution inevitable, will sometimes change his music."

Here is a story which is exceedingly funny, too humarous some think, to be Jerrold's own invention:

"Wo have heard of a man, reasonable in been rained, all his vast property swallowed received the shad and paid the money, but segars and lager, and a small supply of iceby an earthquake. The opportunity for acquiring thorough mowledge in these branches is as great in this Institution as in any in the country; so that no physician of the Homeopathic School need feel any hesitation in sending his students here to be educated. It is not true that Allopathic Colleges furnish greater facilities for acquiring a greater practical knowledge in the various departments of the profession, than does the Homeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania; and as

Let me now put on a paper cap and a waiter apron, and, before concluding this article, give some experienced hints on the cooking of macaroni. In England, it is boiled to a pulp-error the first. First take your water, as Mrs. Glass might say; let it boil well, and then put in your macaroni. The finger will soon ascertain whether the macaroni is softening; and, before it loses its consistency, you must take it up. Now then for your sauces. You may mix with it either a good tomato sauce, or a rich meat gravy, and a plate of grated cheese must be placed on the table; out of which you must perforce sprinkle your macaroni. There are many other more complicated and luxurious ways of dressing the article, which are beyond the reach of my science. get the pitch. With the smaller kinds you will enrich your soups, and some of them you may convert into really a delicious dish, called Priest Stranglers, so fond are the reverend gentle-

PONTIUS PILATE NOT DEAD YET .--- When Mrs B., the actress, was making a summer excursion in the country, she was accompanied by her husband, and a party of his and her friends. One of these was a Mr. -, formerly a pilot on the Boston station, who had laughed and grown fat so long that he had become, like Wolsey, "a man of unbounded stomach." Some one asked, "Who s this large man in Mrs. ----'s suite?" "That," said his informant, "is Mr.----; he is apilot."
